

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

"Forefathers' Graves"

"Beneath the roots of tangled weeds,
Afair in country graveyards lie,
The men whose unrecorded deeds
Have stamped this nation's destiny.

We praise the present stock and man,
But have we ever thought to praise
The strong, still, humble lives that ran
The deep cut channels of those days?

Beneath those tottering slabs of slate,
Whose tribute moss and mould efface,
Sleeps the calm dust that made us great;
The true substratum of our race."

PREFACE.

We have thought, while reading works of a genealogical nature, that some one should have collected extracts from the introductions of the authors, and thus have acquired fame as a maker of a Book of Prefaces. Such a work would tell of the incentives which prompted the writers to spend years in tracing the several lines of their kin, as well as of the various forms of regret and astonishment at the apathy and neglect of a large number of the younger generations, who had failed to respond to repeated inquiries, or to evince even an ordinary interest in family relationships. It would tell that each and every family had been representative of much, if not everything, that was good and noble in man; and also of authors who would declare, without any shadow of embarrassment, that the pursuit of their work and the publication of their books had been at a great financial loss to them; and the whole, making a collection of expressions and sentiments which would amuse and entertain the average genealogical enthusiast, as well as offer some consolation and help to the aspirant for the honor of being the family historian.

We do not suppose the authors of this genealogy have met with experiences greatly differing from those of all compilers of family records. The following bit of history will serve as our excuse for being associated with this work.

Seven of the twelve sons of James and Nicholas Noyes remained in Old Newbury, as tillers of the soil, or as workers at their mechanical trades; and it was not until the troublesome days of Indian warfare had ceased, that many farmers ventured to migrate to the newly formed settlements at the northward. The first exodus from the crowded farms of Newbury, was to the fertile lands sixteen miles distant, amid the hills and valleys in the "Haverhill District in New Hampshire," which comprised the present towns of Plaistow, Atkinson and Hampstead, where before 1760, eighteen Noyeses with their families had established homes, making the locality almost a second Newbury in point of number and influence of the inhabitants by the name of Noyes.

Some of the families after a short stay, having a desire to own more land, and with a proclivity towards pioneering, which has been characteristic of some branches of the family, migrated to what was then almost a wilderness,—Boscawen, Hollis, Landaff, Lisbon, and other uncleared lands in northern New Hampshire and Vermont; but after one hundred years had passed, and three generations of Noyeses had lived and died, within a radius of three miles, amidst a population of about five hundred, more than one-fifth bore the name of Noyes, and two-thirds of the remainder were related to them by marriage. For several years the name of Noyes appeared on the voters' list more numerous than any other, and town offices were filled from the ranks, church choirs were composed almost entirely of them, and the school rooms held many Noyes children presided over by Noyes teachers.

It was in the midst of these scenes, with parents and great-grandparents, each named of Noyes, as a descendant from both James and Nicholas Noyes, that the associate author of this genealogy was born and has lived her life. From early girlhood many pleasant hours have been spent among aged relatives, who, from their strong and retentive memories, related incidents in connection with the family. Relationship was to them a theme of absorbing interest, and their narrations developed in her a love of research along family lines and a pardonable pride in their history.

So that, when Colonel Noyes, early in his task asked for data to enable him to perfect his records, it was a pleasant work for her to assist as she could. From collecting all available records in the home locality, she extended her work, by trying to assist in tracing the branches of the family that located elsewhere, by examining the vital statistics of forty or more towns and cities, probate and registry of deed records in New Hampshire and eastern Massachusetts, and by personal interview and correspondence, wherever a possible addition to the work could be obtained.

She is indebted to many public officials for their assistance, to various authors from whose town histories and family genealogies much of value has been learned; to numerous friends and correspondents, for their willingness to help; to her mother, and especially to her honored father, who, although more than eighty-five years of age, has ever taken an interest in the work, and with generous material aid has enabled her to devote the time and expense incident to her research.

As a co-worker in her limited way, since 1892, with Colonel Noyes, stationed at far away army posts, while the field has been abundantly large, it is just to say, that the part that she has taken towards the completion of these volumes, has indeed been small compared with the results attained by him through his thousands of letters and circulars of inquiry, to all parts of the world, combined with his natural ability as a genealogist.

H. E. N.

CHAPTER I.

INTRODUCTORY.

In the natural order of things, the first volume of this work should have been devoted to the descendants of Rev. James Noyes, he having been the elder of the two brothers ; but soon after we began collecting the records, we found four others working on his branch, but none working on the other branch (Nicholas') : so we gave first attention to collecting and compiling the records of the descendants of Nicholas, until that branch was about complete.

The fact that four others were collecting records of Rev. James' branch has no doubt prevented us from securing as full records of that branch as we have of his brother's ; as some who had answered letters or circulars from them, would take no notice of ours received later. In justice to the others working on this line, it is but fair to state that with but a single exception, they have afforded us all assistance at their command. As a result of the other efforts, the genealogies of two small branches have been published ; one by the late Horatio N. Noyes of Cleveland, Ohio (before ours was begun) giving the direct ancestors and descendants of Joseph Clark Noyes of Morrisville, Vt., much of which we copy, by permission. The other by Judge R. A. Wheeler of Stonington, Conn., gives some of the Connecticut branches, portions of which are also copied, by permission. Where our dates differ from theirs, we give them as received from those named, or their relatives.

Mr. LaVerne W. Noyes of Chicago has published the genealogy of his branch, some of which is copied by his permission; his work being quite recent, has rather helped than impeded ours.

Since the introductory chapter of Vol. 1 was written, the following copy of the notes of the eminent jurist, William Curtis Noyes, has been received, and is now published, as the result of the matured judgment of one of the most able men of our name; and one who would not make public such data without thorough research and mature deliberation. By this it will be seen that he was the first of whom we have any record, who investigated the early history of the family, and origin of the name.

(Copy of a memorandum furnished by Wm. Curtis Noyes, No. 50 Wall St., New York, Dec. 20, 1847.)

" The first account I have hitherto been able to find of the family of Noyes, is contained in Domesday book, being the compilation made by William the Conqueror, about 1086. By this it appears that William Des Noyers was one of the military commanders of the Conqueror, and settled (with two others of the same name, although it is spelled Noers and Noies) in the County of Norfolk, where they had large possessions.

" " " p. 116 to 135 " "

" " " p. 117 etc.

In Thierry's " History of the Norman Conquest " page 118 he is stated to have been one of the Barons of the Conqueror. I find that in the Norman language, the word Noyes means " Crowned "—Vide Kilham's Nor. Dic. in voc.

The family continued in Norfolk and in Suffolk many years, their descendants remaining to this day. Vide Bloomfield's His. of Norfolk.

One of the family suffered under the reign of Mary, being arrested and thrown into prison for denying the doctrine of the "real presence"—Vide "Fox's Book of Martyrs" John Noyes, page 311, Vol. 2.

The family emigrated to this country from England in 1634 and settled in Newbury, Mass. There were two of the same name, viz., James, the first minister of that town, and his brother Nicholas. James was educated at Oxford, Vide Young's Chronicles of the Pilgrims, 2d Ed. 402, Note 1. Nicholas, a son of the preceding, wrote a poetical "Preface Dedicatory" to Mather's Magnalia. He was very active in the witchcraft trials in 1692. A full list of their descendants is to be found in Farmer's "Genealogical Register" of the early settlers of New England.

A son of the preceding James was settled in Stonington, Conn., and was one of the founders and a Trustee of Yale College. His son was a tutor in the college, and was afterwards pastor of the first church in New Haven, as the successor of Rev. Mr. Pierpont in 1716. A full account of him and his ministry will be found in "Bacon's Historical Discourses" pp. 198-242.

From the account of the family in Farmer, which extends through several generations, any member of it will probably be able to ascertain the particular branch to which he belongs.
(Sgd.) WILLIAM CURTIS NOYES.

(Note by Col. Noyes.) The reference to Thierry's History probably means the French edition. Judge Noyes' father had evidently kept in touch with his relatives in their early Connecticut home, where their ancestors had always lived (Stonington and Groton, Conn.) and where the town records were well kept; and so had no difficulty in connecting his line with its ancestor (James) named in Farmer's Register. But two generations later, not half of those who returned our circulars, could connect their branch with its ancestor.

ARRANGEMENT.

SERIAL NUMBERS.

The name of every descendant of Rev. James Noyes, who married, has a number before it for reference, called its serial number. Every male who married and had a family, will have two other numbers, where he is shown as the head of his family (unless it follows his father's, when he will have only his serial number): the number following the name, and on the same line is his father's serial number: the third number, immediately after, and just above the name, denotes the number of the generation, counting from James, as the first generation. In the family records, this number is given but once (to the first child) as all children of the same family, are of the same generation. Every son who married and had a family is recorded twice: once as a child of his father's family, and again as the head of his own family, and this is indicated by a star before the serial number of his name, in his father's family; look back for the serial number following the name, and this will show the father's family: the number following his name will lead to the grandfather's family: and so on, back to the son of James who is the ancestor in the second generation.

The serial numbers of the married daughters will be found in the records of their fathers' families only. When the serial number of a son is not found where it should naturally be (in the natural sequence of his generation), it will be found following the record of his father's family, if he had a family: if there were no children, he is shown only in his father's family.

Some of the serial numbers were accidentally omitted, in passing from one family or generation to another ; others were purposely omitted, viz.:— all numbers ending with 1, after 900 (901, 911, 921, etc.), in order to provide for additions, to correct errors, etc., etc. Some of these numbers have already been used. In a few cases some of the children have been given their father's serial number, with the letters, a, b. c, etc., added to identify them ; the record of their marriage having been overlooked when the families were numbered.

This volume contains all that is available concerning the known descendants of Rev. James Noyes ; and is divided into eleven chapters, one introductory, and one for him and each of his six sons ; one for Peter Noyes of Sudbury, and those whose ancestry has not been determined ; one for records of military service, etc., and one miscellaneous. Following the last chapter will be a number of leaves, conveniently ruled, for making additional records of births, marriages, deaths, etc. By using these, each family can continue its genealogy for several generations to come ; and the female lines can continue their genealogies, from where they branch from the Noyes line.

The marriage index will have the names of the allied families arranged alphabetically by the surnames : except that Noyes-Noyes marriages are so arranged by the given names of the wives. Before each name is the serial number of the Noyes to whom the person named was married, followed by the number of the page where the record will be found, if the Noyes ancestry is known : if not known, only the page number is given. Quite a number of marriage records have been copied from other genealogies, town records, newspapers, etc., without the Noyes ancestry having been determined.

Example — John Noyes married Tabitha Stone, as recorded in Chapter III : his serial number is 46. The marriage index will show — 46-Stone, Tabitha — (page number.) Look for number 46 on the page given (Chapter III), where John is shown at the head of his family. Following the marriage index will be the index of all Noyeses named in this volume, arranged alphabetically by their given names. Following this will be the index of all towns, cities, counties, etc., with page references.

As a rule all titles have been omitted in the records of the children of a family; and what is known of any service in the army, navy, marines or merchant marine service, is stated under the name of the head of the family, if it is his service that is recorded; but if it is the service of a son who is not the head of a family, then the service record will follow that of the family. All service records from official sources will be recorded in Chapter X. Church and other local titles are generally omitted, except that for clergymen — Rev.

As a complete record of service of all Noyeses in Colonial, Indian, Revolutionary, Mexican, Civil and Spanish wars was considered desirable, application was made to the chief of the Record and Pension office, of the War Department, for copies of all such records. In reply it was stated that it was forbidden to furnish copies of such records for publication. But personal requests for records of not more than two ancestors of applicants, will be furnished under rules adopted for such cases. (See Chapter X.)

In some cases the birth dates seem to indicate that the laws of nature have failed: in all such cases it is safe to assume that dates, etc., have been incorrectly copied, or that the difference between the old style of chronology and the new, is not understood.

There are quite a number of colored families named Noyes in New England; they are probably descendants of slaves owned by Noyeses in Colonial times. The records of Woburn show this marriage under date of Oct. 8, 1760: "John Noyes, a mulatto servant to Lt. James Hay of Stoneham and Phillis — of Woburn were married by Rev. John Earl, Sept. 8, 1760."

READ THIS CAREFULLY.

To assist in tracing ancestry, and to show graphically the lines of descent, a genealogical chart of the Noyes descendants of Rev. James Noyes, in the second and third generations, is given in Chapter II; and there will be other charts preceding the third or fourth generations, continuing this plan, including the eighth generation. With these and the directions already given, there should be no difficulty in tracing the ancestral lines. The absence of the names of male descendants, in many cases, in these charts, does not imply that there were none: it simply indicates that none have been found. In some cases it is certain that there were male descendants, but no record of them was available.

On account of the frequent repetition of many of the given names, the Noyes index will not be of much benefit in finding any Noyes record, except for an unusual given name. The better method in all cases will be to consult the marriage index. If your name is Noyes look for your mother's maiden name. The serial number of the Noyes whom she married will precede it, followed by the page. In a similar manner, any other family may be found, if the maiden name of the mother is known.

If your name is not Noyes, you can find the Noyes family to which your mother belongs, by looking for your father's name in the marriage index: before it will be your mother's serial number, followed by the page.

Abbreviations:—Adm., administrator b., born; bef., before; d., died; d. y., died young; m., married; dau., daughter; grad., graduated; inv., inventory; rem., removed; res., resided, or resides; unkm., unmarried. When no state is given after the name of the place, Massachusetts is meant. An interrogation point (?) implies doubt as to the date or other record preceding it.

CHAPTER II.

REV. JAMES NOYES.

Rev. James Noyes came to this country as narrated in the first chapter of Volume I, and after a short stay in Mystic (where Medford now is), moved with some friends to Newbury, going by the water route via. the passage between Plum Island and the main land, to Parker river, where they landed, not far from its mouth.

When the pastor of the Old North Church, Boston (the Rev. Cotton Mather), was preparing his ecclesiastical history of New England (which he called "Magnalia Christi Americana"), he wrote to Rev. Nicholas Noyes, then minister in Salem, asking him for some account concerning a person so nearly related to him (Rev. James Noyes, his uncle); and "was favored with the following relation; and although he were pleased in his letters to tell me 'that he had sent me only a rude, immethodical jumble of things, intending that I should serve my occasions out of them for a composition of my own:' yet I find that I shall not give my readers a better satisfaction, anyway, than by transcribing the words of my friend. The account in his own words, is too elegant, and expressive to need any alteration."

REV. NICHOLAS NOYES' ACCOUNT OF HIS UNCLE, REV. JAMES NOYES.

Mr. James Noyes was born in 1608, in Choulderton, Wiltshire, of Godly parents. His father was a Minister of the same town,—a very learned man,—the school-master of Mr. Robert Parker, and he had much of his education and tutorage under Mr. Thomas Parker.

He was called by him from Brazen Nose College in Oxford, to help him in teaching the Free School at Newbury, where they taught school together till the time they came to New England.

He was converted in his youth by the ministry of Dr. Twiss and Mr. Thomas Parker, and was admired for his piety, and his virtue, in his younger years. The reason of his coming to New England was because he could not comply with the ceremonies of the Church of England.

He was married in England to Miss Sarah Brown, of South Hampton, not long before he came to New England, which was in 1634.

In the same ship came Mr. Thomas Parker, Mr. James Noyes, and a younger brother, Nicholas Noyes, who was then a single man; Mr. Parker and Mr. Noyes, and others that came over with them, fasted and prayed together many times before they undertook this voyage; and on the sea Mr. Parker and Mr. Noyes preached or expounded, one in the forenoon, and the other in the afternoon, every day during the voyage, unless some extraordinary thing intervened; and were abundant in prayer.

When they arrived, Mr. Parker was first called to preach at Ipswich, and Mr. Noyes at Mistick, at which places they continued nigh a year. He had a motion made unto him to be Minister at Watertown; but Mr. Parker and others of his acquaintance, settling at Newbury, and gathering a tenth of the churches in the colony, and calling Mr. Noyes to be teacher of it, he preferred that place, being loth to be separated from Mr. Parker and brethren that had so often fasted and prayed together, both in England and on the Atlantic sea. So he became the teacher of that church, and continued, painful and successful in that station something above twenty years, without any considerable trouble in the church.

Notwithstanding his principles as to Discipline were something differing from many of his brethren, there was such condescension on both parts, that peace and order was not interrupted.

He was much loved and honored in Newbury,—his memory is precious there to this day, and his Catechism (which is a publick and standing testimony of his understanding, and orthodoxy in the principles of religion), is publicly and privately used in that town hitherto. He was very learned in the Tongues, and in the Greek, excelled most. He was much read in the Fathers and the Schoolmen, and much esteemed in the Ministry.

His conversation was so unquestionably Godly, that they who differed from him in the smaller matters as to discipline, held a most amicable correspondence with him, and had an high estimate of him. * * * He was as religious at home as abroad, in his family and in secret, as he was publicly ; and they that best knew him, most loved and esteemed him. * * * He had a long and tedious sickness, which he bore patiently and cheerfully ; and he died joyfully, in the forty-eighth year of his age, Oct. 22, 1656. He left six sons and two daughters, all of which lived to be married and have children, though since one son and one daughter be dead. He hath now living, fifty-six children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren ; and his brother that came over with him a single man, is, through the mercy of God, yet living, and hath of children ; grandchildren, and great grand-children, above an hundred ; which is an instance of divine favor, in making the families of his servants in the wilderness like a Flock."

EXTRACT FROM J. J. CURRIER'S "OULD NEWBURY."

Rev. James Noyes' first residence in Newbury was at the Lower Green ; but on the removal of the meeting house, in 1646 to the Upper Green, he built a house on what is now known as Parker street, and lived there until his death.

In the "Proprietors' Book" it is recorded that, "In consideration of Mr. James Noyes his resigning up unto the towns hands four acres by the river side, Two acres in Richard Kent's Island & four acres in the Neck behind the great Swamp, they granted him eight acres by the New Pond at the New Town to continue in his and his heys for ever."

There is no date to this record, but it is probable that the grant did not take effect until 1646, as the commissioners appointed in 1642 to lay out the new town, ordered "that in respect of the time for the inhabitants removing from the place they now inhabit, to that which is laid out and appointed for their new habitations, each inhabitant shall have their house lotte foure years from the day of the date of the commission."

The house was built about this time, and the two cousins, minister and teacher, lived there in pleasant companionship for nearly ten years, when Mr. Noyes died, Oct. 22, 1656, aged forty-eight. Mr. Parker, writing of him, says: "Mr. James Noyes, my worthy colleague in the Ministry of the Gospel, was a man of singular qualifications,—in piety, excelling, and implacable to all heresy and schism,—a most able warrior against the same. He was of a reaching and ready apprehension,—a large invention,—a most profound judgment,—a rare and tenacious comprehensive memory,—fixed and unmovable in his grounded conceptions, sure in words and speech,—without rashness,—gentle and mild in all expressions, without passion or provoking language. And as he was a noble disputant, so he would never provoke his adversary, saving by the short knocks, and heavy weight of arguments.

He was of so loving, and compassionate, and humble carriage, that I believe never any were acquainted with him, but did desire the continuance of his society and acquaintance.

Noyes House and Parker Street, Newbury.

He was resolute for the truth, and in defence thereof, had no respect to any persons.

He was a most excellent Counselor in doubts, and could strike at a hair's breath like the Benjamins and expedited the entangled out of the briars.

He was courageous in danger, and still was apt to believe the best and make fair weather in a storm.

He was much honored and esteemed in the Country, and his death was much bewailed. I think he may be reckoned among the greatest worthies of the age."

The will of the Rev. James Noyes, dated Oct. 16, 1656, gave all his real estate and personal property to his wife. In the inventory, filed in the Probate Office in Salem, mention is made of a house with seven acres of land adjoining, and an orchard all valued at 100 pounds. The enclosure described as an orchard will account for the additional acre named in the original grant.

His widow and children continued to live in the house, with the Rev. Thomas Parker as an honored member of the family. Mr. Parker died unmarried April 24, 1677. After the death of Mrs. Noyes, ten or twelve years later, the house passed into the possession of the son Thomas, who married Sarah Greenleaf; and for several successive generations, they and their children and their children's children resided there; the last occupant, Mrs. Mary Coffin Noyes, of the sixth generation from the Rev. James Noyes, died Jan. 2, 1895.

The old house is still in a good state of preservation as will be seen by a glance at the photographic views; the heavy oak frame shows no signs of decay, and the repairs that have been made from time to time, have kept the exterior walls in good order and condition. The chimney was formerly about four yards square at the base, and extended nearly to the back wall of the house. About fifteen years ago it became necessary to reduce its size; in doing this the existence of a secret closet was discovered; there was no entrance to it from either the first or second story, and the only way it could have been reached was from the cellar. It was evidently constructed for the purpose of providing a safe hiding place for gold and silver and valuable household effects. The winds have blown and the rains have descended and beaten upon the old house for two centuries and a half, but it still stands, a memorial of the past, closely identified with the early history of Newbury and the domestic life of two of its eminent divines.

* * * * *

The old Noyes house was originally of four rooms, each about 18 by 22 feet. The west part was built on by Silas Noyes about 1808, or about one hundred years ago. The southeast room down stairs is now 18 by 21 feet, and contains many articles of the old time use. The northeast side has the old table and chair of Rev. James Noyes, brought from England.

Room enough to make the cooking room or kitchen was taken out of the chimney, and the cooking stove of the family residing there is now there. The northeast chamber has been divided into three rooms, and the southeast chamber into two large rooms. In the attic are many of the relics of the Noyeses of each generation, a clutter of most everything. The chimney is about six feet square at the top of the second story. In the hall is the old table of James Noyes, which they call an "eight legged table," and his old arm chair. The elm trees shown in the picture were probably planted about the time that the house was built.

The Boston Herald in 1903 gives the following sketch of the beginnings of Newbury, and of the oldest house in the town :—

"Newbury is named for Newbury, Eng., whence many of its earliest colonists came. Prominent among these, in fact, the leading founders of the town as well as founders of its first church, were the Rev. Thomas Parker and the Rev. James Noyes, two cousins, who came out from England together. Mr. Parker had studied at Oxford, at Dublin and in Holland, and attracted some attention as an ecclesiastical writer, when he went to the English Newbury to teach its free school.

In 1634, with Mr. Noyes and 100 others, he came to New England and lived for a short time at Ipswich, then called Agawam. This plantation being made too crowded by the addition of these newcomers. Mr. Parker, with his little band of immigrants, removed the following year to the banks of a little river not far off, which they named the Parker, in honor of their leader, and where they established the town of Newbury.

These original emigrants were about 40 in number, but others joined them during that first summer of 1635. Farms were allotted and a church at once organized, with Mr. Parker as pastor and Mr. Noyes as teacher.

OLDEST HOUSE IN TOWN.

The house built by Mr. Noyes on his farm, and in which he, his family and Mr. Parker lived, is still standing, is probably the oldest house in town. There are no records to show when it was erected, but it was probably between 1640 and 1650. It has never known any owner but a Noyes, its last tenant being Miss Mary Coffin Noyes, of the sixth generation of the name.

It is Newbury's proudest show place, full of the objects and the associations which delight the dreamy and imaginative tourist. The arrangement of the rooms is after the style of the times, with the addition of a wing at the back, giving the house the shape of the letter T. The small front entry with doors opening on either side, and the narrow staircase, making two square turns in an ascent of less than a dozen steps has never been altered. The slender baluster is very quaint, and seems very fragile to us as we remember some we have seen in other houses.

The cellar door opens under the stair. Here we may realize the great bulk of the chimney, which makes, as is usual, the back wall of the stairway.

Standing by the stair is an old-fashioned table, very oddly arranged so as to fold up, if necessary. This, together with an oak chair, very heavy and clumsy, and some other articles, are said to have been brought from England by Mr. Noyes.

The north room, on the right of the entrance, has been divided into three apartments, each as large as the average rooms in a dwelling of our time. Much of the plastering on the ceilings is over 200 years old, and is as firm as ever. To enumerate the articles of antique furniture which this house contains would require more space than we can devote to the purpose.

The chimney was formerly about four yards square at the bottom, and extended nearly to the back wall of the house. About twenty years ago the bricks began to fall out at the back, owing to the large amount of sand in the mortar. It was then decided to make the chimney smaller, and to create a small kitchen between the two large rooms in the main part of the house. The brick and mortar taken away made 20 wagon loads; and hidden away in a corner of the chimney, the workmen discovered a secret closet, the existence of which had never been suspected. It was probably used to hide valuables in case of Indian raids.

The rough, unfinished garret, extends the whole length of the house, and is stored with treasures of a bygone age. Here we find three old guns, nearly six feet long and falling to pieces with extreme age. There we discover two swords, one an army weapon of antique pattern and the other a gentleman's rapier, such as dangled by the side of the gallants of old, ready to spring forth in a flash to defend an honored name, to resent an insult, or to strike a blow for church and country.

The later years of Mr. Noyes and Mr. Parker were darkened by a church controversy which began in 1645 and continued for nearly 30 years, attracting the attention of people throughout the colony. It originated in the opposition of the claims of Mr. Parker, the minister, and Mr. Noyes, the teacher, to exclusive authority in church government and discipline. At different times the civil authorities were invoked and interposed with little avail. The contest ended only with the lives of the principal contestants.

Mr. Noyes and Mr. Parker lived in this old house the rest of their lives, and died there. The estate then passed to Mr. Noyes' son, Daniel Noyes, grandson of the builder, and son of the second owner, who went to the Madeira islands about 1703, where he established himself in business as a merchant and acquired considerable wealth. His wife is supposed to have died there, leaving no children. In 1728 Daniel Noyes died. He made a will, and after donating a small sum to the poor, and much more to the gentlemen named as his executors, left the rest to his father."

Rev. James Noyes was the author of quite a number of works on religious subjects; copies of the title pages of two being given :—

1647.

(From J. J. Currier's History of Newbury.)

This is a large quarto work of ninety-five pages. The preface written by another says of the author, "He is altogether free from a spirit of fraction, seeking only truth and satisfaction, and therefore he hath ingeniously laid down his judgment, which is in some things coincident with the judgment of the reverend presbeters of New England.

In some things consenting with our reverend assembly here in England and in some things distant from them both; being neither for Aristotle, nor for Plato but for truth; neither for Paul nor for Apollo but for Christ."

The following are extracts from the work. "The church is to be carried, not to carry; to obey, not to command; to be subject, not to govern." If all members, young and old, children and men, if thousands together must judge and govern upon conscience together with the presbytery, first, it must needs to interrupt the work; second, it is work enough, a double labour, for the elders to instruct the church how to judge.

There is more time spent in informing the church than in determining the case. Must elders hold the hands of the common members (as the masters teacheth scholars to write) and act only by them? Third, pride is an amidamical decrease in a democratical government. Who is sufficient to hold the reins in authority? Where there are no standing magistrates in the Commonwealth, and in the church, as governors at all, the offspring is likely to be an Ichabod. Fourth, confusion and disorder are inevitable, turbulent. The church ought to be a pattern of punctual order. A democracie installed by Plato nudines popularies. Fifth, as a church must needs be too long a doing by so many, when it is easy, so it must needs be done too soon by such as are precipitant, when it is difficult. Some are conscientious and scrupulous, others unreasonable, ignorant, youthful. This is a pardocracy as well as democracy. The seat of government is the seat of wisdom."

TO THE READER.

Gentle Reader,

Thou mayest not expect this work should be so perfect and exact, as if the Author had been living to put it out himself. The original Copy also was lately lost in a ship foundered at Sea; and he wrote this Treatise in the last half year of his life, which was a time of continual weakness and sickness ending his death. I did often press him long before to set down his notions in writing; but he was still averse, until the foresaid half year of his last continuance on earth. Notwithstanding all these discouragements, I thought it not meet to deprive thee of the use of this his last labour, because I conceived it would be very useful for the present time.

The Author Mr. James Noyes (my worthy colleague in the ministry of the Gospel here) was a man of Singular qualifications, in piety excelling, an implacable enemy to all herisie and schism, and a most able warrior against the same . . . He was couragious in danger and still was apt to believe the best, and made faire weather in a storm. He was much honoured and esteemed in the Countrey, and his death was much bewailed. I think he may be reckoned among the greatest worthies of this age. Upon the rising of our late usurpers, and the beheading of our most gracious and most excellent King Charles the first, of blessed memory, by a villanous stroke and under a wicked pretence of justice & upon the defeating of our renowned King Charles the Second (whom God preserve) he fell into such a depth of sadness and sorrow of heart that it hastened his death as was believed. So he died in the 48th year of his age Octob. 22, 1656. He left behind him this posthume, imperfect and incompleat, which if he had lived he would have perfected with the addition of many rare and excellent notions for the enlightning and discovery of truths

Now as touching this work that followeth I have presumed to dedicate the same to your Royal Majesty, because the matter of it pertaineth to your consideration, and because of the singular joy and hopes I have of your ascending into the Throne, and because the Author was a special lover of your Royal Father (of blessed memory), and of your majesty, the fall of whom stuck so close and neer unto him and wrought in him so deep sorrow and affliction, that it is thought to have been the principal cause of his death. Let your Majesty's Gracious acceptance Countenance the work.

Now the God of all Grace and Mercy, who hath raised up your Majesty into the Throne of Royal Government. . . . confirm and establish you upon your Throne, and crown you with grace, prosperity and glory, unto his own everlasting praise, the beauty and enlargement of the Church, and to the laying a foundation of higher advancement of yourself in the future world than can be here expected. This is, and shall be the constant prayer of

Your Majesty's Most Loyal Servant and Subject,

THOMAS PARKER,

A minister of the Gospel, though unworthy, and Pastor of the Church of Newbury, in New England. Written from Newbury, in New England, August 6, 1660.

In 1641 the General Court desired that "the elders would make a Catechism for the instruction of youth in the grounds of religion. In compliance with this desire Mr. James Noyes of Newbury composed a short catechism for the use of the children there." The following is a copy, published by Bartholomew Green of Boston, edition of 1714, and was printed in Coffin's History of Newbury, 1845. As it was undoubtedly composed more than two hundred and fifty years ago by our ancestor, Rev. James Noyes, we have thought it worthy of preservation, as a specimen of the "olden time," and of the principles then inculcated on the rising generation.

"A SHORT CATECHISM.

Question. How do the Scriptures prove themselves to be true?

Answer. By the holiness of the matter, by the majesty of their style, by the accomplishment of the prophecies, by the efficacy of their power over the hearts of men, besides the Holy Ghost beareth witness, helping us to discern the truth of them.

Q. What is the sum of the Scriptures?

A. A doctrine of a godly life.

Q. Wherein consists a godly life?

A. In the obedience of faith.

Q. What is faith?

A. Faith is the effectual assent to the doctrine of the Scriptures, especially concerning the Grace of God in Christ.

- Q. What doth the Scriptures reveal concerning God?
- A. His nature and his acts.
- Q. What is revealed concerning his nature ?
- A. His Essence and his Person.
- Q. How is his Essence made manifest ?
- A. By his Names and his Attributes.
- Q. What are his Attributes ?
- A. His Independency, Unity, Immutability, Eternity, Infiniteness, Omnipresence, Omnipotency, Wisdom, Omnicency, Holiness, Blessedness, Sovereignty, Goodness, Mercy, Meekness, Clemency, Justice, and Verity.
- Q. How many persons are there in the Godhead ?
- A. Three, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost ; and every one of these is God ; and yet there is but one God.
- Q. How many fold are the acts of God ?
- A. Two fold, eternal and temporal.
- Q. What are the eternal acts of God ?
- A. His Decrees.
- Q. How many fold are his Decrees ?
- A. Two fold, general and particular.
- Q. What is the general Decree of God ?
- A. An eternal act of God, whereby he did determine to make the world, and dispose of all things therein.
- Q. What are the particular Decrees of God ?
- A. Election and Reprobation.
- Q. What is Election ?
- A. An eternal act of God, whereby he did determine to glorify himself, in saving a certain number of persons through Faith in Christ.
- Q. What is Reprobation ?
- A. An eternal act of God, whereby he did determine to glorify himself in condemning a certain number of persons for their sins.
- Q. What are the temporal acts of God ?
- A. Creation, Preservation, and Government.

Q. How many folds in his Government?

A. Two folds, general and special.

Q. What is the general Government?

A. A temporal act of God, whereby he doth dispose of all creatures according to a general Providence.

Q. What is the special Government of God?

A. A temporal act of God, whereby he doth dispose of the reasonable creatures according to a special Covenant.

Q. How many Covenants has God made with man?

A. Two, the Covenant of the Law and the Covenant of the Gospel.

Q. What is the Covenant of the Law?

A. A promise of Life, in perfect and personal obedience.

Q. What is the Covenant of the Gospel?

A. A promise of Life on faith in Christ (Mark 16 : 16).

Q. What is the occasion of the Covenant of the Gospel?

A. Adam's sin (Rom. 5 : 17).

Q. What is Sin?

A. A breach of God's Law (I John, 3 : 4).

Q. How many kinds of Sin are there?

A. Two, Original and Actual.

Q. What is Original Sin?

A. A being contrary to God's Law (Eph. 4 : 22).

Q. What is Actual Sin?

A. A doing contrary to God's Law (Rom. 7 : 23 ; 1 John, 3 : 4).

Q. What are the effects of sin?

A. Guilt and punishment (Rom. 3 : 19-23).

Q. What is punishment?

A. An infliction of evil for sin ; namely, Death, temporal and eternal (Rom. 5 : 12 ; 6 : 23).

Q. How do we escape eternal Death?

A. By the Covenant of the Gospel only (Rom. 3 : 23-24).

Q. Can we escape Death by the Covenant of the Law?

A. No. Because we cannot perform the conditions of it, which is perfect Obedience; yea, by reason of the Fall of ADAM, we cannot do any good thing (Heb. 12: 20; Rom. 3: 20; John 15: 5).

Q. Can we perform the condition of the Covenant?

A. Yes. Because God has showed us in His Scriptures that he will help us through Faith in Christ to perform the condition of it (Jere. 31: 33).

Q. What is Christ?

A. The eternal Son of God, and both God and Man (John 1: 14; Heb. 2: 16).

Q. What are we to consider in Jesus Christ?

A. His Natures, His personal union, and His own Offices (Isaiah 9: 6; Rom. 1: 5).

Q. How many Natures hath Christ?

A. Two. The Nature of God and the Nature of Man, otherwise called the Divine Nature and the Human.

Q. What is the personal Union of Christ?

A. The subsistence of the Human Nature in the second person of the Deity (Phil. 26: 78).

Q. What are the Offices of Christ?

A. His Mediatorship, Kingship, Priesthood, Prophethip (Tim. 2: 3; Zach. 9: 9; Psalms 110: 4; Deut. 16: 15).

Q. What is the work of Christ's office?

A. Redemption.

Q. What is Redemption?

A. A deliverance of the Elect from sin and misery, by the price of Christian Obedience (Titus 2: 14).

Q. How many fold is Christ's Obedience?

A. Two fold; Active and Passive.

Q. What is his Active Obedience?

A. A doing the Will of God (Rom. 8: 4).

Q. What is his Passive Obedience?

A. His suffering the Will of God, even to the Death on the Cross (Mat. 8: 15; Isaiah 3: 12).

Q. What is the application of Redemption?

A. A giving of the Spirit, in and with the grace of the Spirit (Eph. 2 : 5).

Q. What is the grace of the Spirit?

A. Vocation, Justification, Adoption, and Glorification (Tim. 2 : 9).

Q. What is Vocation?

A. A grace of the Spirit, whereby God doth give Faith and repentance unto his elect ones (Rom. 8 : 30).

Q. What is Faith?

A. A sight of the grace of the Gospel whereby we come to God, in Christ, above all things for salvation, or else a belief that God will pardon our Sin in a way of repentance for Christ's sake (Mat. 16 : 28 ; Acts 9 : 38 ; Mark 1 : 15).

Q. What is Repentance?

A. An outpouring purpose to forsake Sin, for sorrow for Sin (Psalm 37 : 27 ; Zech. 12 : 10 ; Hosea 14 : 2-3).

Q. What is Justification?

A. A grace of the Spirit, whereby God doth accept and pronounce all those that are called to be just unto eternal life (Rom. 8 : 20).

Q. What is Adoption?

A. A grace of the Spirit, whereby God doth accept and pronounce all those that are called to be his children, and heirs unto eternal life (Rom. 8 : 14, 15, 16, 17).

Q. What is Glorification?

A. A grace of the Spirit, whereby God doth translate a man out of the misery of Sin into Blessedness (Rom. 8 : 20).

Q. How is the application of Redemption made known?

A. By the experiences of the grace of the Spirit, and by the witness of the Spirit helping us to discern the truth of them.

Q. What is the subject of Redemption?

A. The Church.

Q. What are the means of applying Redemption?

A. They are especially Publick Ministers and private duties (Rom. 10 : 13-14).

Q. What are the Ministerial Acts?

A. Preaching of the Word, Prayer, Administration of the Sacrament and Discipline (Mat. 28 : 19 ; Tim. 2 : 1 ; Mat. 16 : 19 ; 16 : 17).

Q. What is a Sacrament?

A. A visible sign instituted by God for the confirmation of the Covenant.

Q. How many Sacraments are there?

A. Two. Baptism and the Lord's Supper.

Q. What is the Sign signifying the Baptism?

A. Water, and the washing with water (Peter 3 : 21).

Q. What is the thing signified?

A. The Blood of Christ washes away our Sins unto eternal life (Rom. 6 : 4).

Q. What is the Sign signifying the Lord's Supper?

A. The bread and wine ; the bread broken, and the wine poured out ; the giving and the receiving of it.

Q. What is the thing signified in the Lord's Supper?

A. The Body of Christ broken on the Cross, His blood shed for our Sins, offered to sinners in the way of believing, and received by Faith, for assurance of eternal life (1 Cor. 11 : 24, 25, 26, 28 ; John 6 : 1).

Q. What is Discipline?

A. A correction of scandalous professors by Church Censures (Mat. 16 : 17).

Q. What is the Season of attending the Publick Ministry?

A. Especially on the first day of the week, or Lord's day (Acts 26 : 7).

Q. When is Redemption consummated?

A. In the Resurrection at the last Judgment, at the second coming of Christ. (Mat. 24 ; 2 ; Hosea 13 ; 14 ; Isaiah 63 : 34.)

Q. How many Commandments are there?

A. Ten.

REV. JAMES NOYES.

Q. Into how many tables are the Commandments divided?

A. Into two tables.

Q. What doth the first Table contain?

A. Our duties towards God, or duties of Religious Worship, in the first four Commandments. (Duet. 4 : 13; Mat. 22 : 37, 38.)

Q. What doth the second Table contain?

A. Our duties towards the Creatures, in the last six.

Q. What is contained in the first Commandment?

A. Natural Worship in Faith, Hope, Love, Fear, hearing the Word and Prayer.

Q. What is Hope?

A. A cleaving to God, as our chieftest good for blessedness. (Psalm 73 : 25.)

Q. What is Love?

A. A cleaving to God, as the chieftest good, and deserving all Glory. (Deut. 6 : 5.)

Q. What is Fear.

A. An admiring of God's Holiness, and all of His perfections. (Deut. 6 : 18 ; Heb. 12 : 28.)

Q. What is contained in the Second Commandment?

A. Instituted Worship in Ministry, Sacrements, and Discipline. (Eph. 4 : 11, 12 ; Mat. 28 : 19.)

A. A grace which disposeth us to relieve all such as are in misery.

Q. What is meekness ?

A. A grace which moderateth anger and revenge. (Num. 12 : 3 ; 1 Pet. 3 : 4.)

Q. What is Patience ?

A. A grace which moderateth grief in Affliction. (Col. 1 : 3.)

Q. What is contained in the seventh Commandment ?

A. A due respect to the purity of our Neighbours in Temperance, Chastity, Modesty, Gravity.

Q. What is temperance ?

A. A grace which moderateth affection in all sensual pleasures. (Titus 3 : 2.)

Q. What is Chastity ?

A. A grace which regulateth the lusts of the flesh. (Thess. 4 : 3, 4, 5.)

Q. What is modesty ?

A. A grace which restraineth us from Wantonness. (1 Tim. 2 : 3.)

Q. What is Gravity?

A. A grace which inclineth us to purity. (1 Pet. 2: 2, 3.)

Q. What is contained in the eighth Commandment?

A. A due respect for the goods of our Neighbours, in righteousness, liberality and frugality. (Rom. 13: 18.)

Q. What is Righteousness?

A. A grace which inclineth us to give all men their due. (Mic. 6: 8.)

Q. What is Liberality?

A. A grace which inclineth us to communicate our goods to our Neighbours. (Rom. 12: 13.)

Q. What is Frugality?

A. A grace which inclineth us to be provident and diligent in our calling.

Q. What is contained in the ninth Commandment?

A. A due respect for the innocency of our Neighbour, in verity and fidelity.

Q. What is Verity?

A. A grace which inclineth us to speak the truth for our Neighbours good. (Zech. 8: 16.)

Q. What is Fidelity?

A. A grace which inclineth us to keep our Promises. (Psalms 16: 4.)

Q. What is contained in the tenth Commandment?

A. A due respect to the prosperity of our Neighbour, in rejoicing in his prosperity, and accepting our own portion with contentation. (Rom. 12: 16.)

Q. What is Contentation?

A. A grace which inclineth us to accept our own portion, whether good or evil, with Thanksgiving. (1 Tim. 6: 6; Heb. 13: 6; Phil. 4: 11.)

It was a coincidence that each of the two brothers, James and Nicholas, should have had six sons; and although all married except one of the sons of Nicholas (Rev. Nicholas), his Noyes descendants (and probably in the female line also) are far more numerous than those of his brother James. This was also apparent as early as the beginning of the fourth generation, as Rev. Nicholas says in his letter to Rev. Cotton Mather that Nicholas then had over a hundred descendants, and James only fifty-six.

Considering the subject of intermarriage among relatives, which is supposed to diminish the birth rate, it is noticeable that there have been twice as many in Nicholas' branch as in that of James, although the percentage of the total number may be about equal. If it were not, the total number in both branches is so small, compared with the total of all the marriages in both branches, that no theory on the subject can be confirmed or refuted.

Comparing the families in the two branches, it is readily seen that Nicholas' branch has the majority of the large families; and noticeably so among those in Maine. If the whole family could be represented in the familiar form of a "family tree," a grand trunk would be the base forking just above the ground, in two unequal trees, one at least twice as large as the other; the undivided tree representing William (the father), the larger fork for Nicholas, and the smaller one for James. On the Nicholas fork there would be five branches for the second generation; these would put out eighteen for the third, and these would sub-divide into about fifty for the fourth, and a hundred and twenty-five branches for the fifth generation. In a similar manner the other fork has divided and sub-divided, but not quite so extensively.

CHAPTER III.

DESCENDANTS OF JOSEPH² NOYES OF SUDBURY.

FIRST SON OF REV. JAMES.

2-Joseph², son of James and Sarah (Brown), was born in Newbury, 15 Oct., 1637. As his birth was not on the town records, and as he settled in Sudbury (where another Joseph Noyes lived at about the same time), it was thought that he was the latter Joseph, son of Peter, as shown in Chapter IX. But the record of Peter Noyes' descendants shows that his son Joseph died before April 2, 1661, when his will was probated. (He died in Barbados; see Hist. Gene. Register, Vol. 47, page 72.) The earliest mention of 2-Joseph in the Sudbury records is 16 Feb., 1662, when he was chosen one of the selectmen, which office he held over twenty-eight years. He was appointed constable, 1667 and 1668; justice of the peace in 1679, and many other offices. He was a man of considerable property, owning a number of slaves. His views on the temperance question can be seen in the following communication:—

*"To the Middlesex County Court:—*In answer to warrant received, I have used what means I could to get the selectmen together, but by reason of one trobel and another, it has been neglected. It is the minds of most of us that ther should be none to retale drink amongst us by the reason of the growing of the sin of drunkenness amongst us.

Our fathers came into this wilderness to enjoy the gospel and its ordinances in its purity, and the conversion of the heathen, but insted of converting them, amongst other sins we have tought them to be drunkards, which we may have cause to fear God has permitted them to be such a scourge as at this present. There be thos that desir lecenses, but such as cannot command themselves ar not fit for such an impleioe or trust. Verbum sapienti satis est quod suffizit. All things considered, it is not mine one mind only, but of some others, that Col. Samuel Horr is best accommodated and the most sutable man that presents himself willing to undertake to entertain travellers, wich, as I understand, is the only, or at least the chief end of a house of entertainment, and not Tonn drunkards. Plain dealing I think is best. I pray pardon my boldness. Your servant, Joseph Noyes, selectman. Sudbury, Febr. the 29, 1692."

He married Mary Darvell (or Davrell), 1662, who died 24 Sept., 1667. He married, second, Mrs. Mary (Dunster) Willard, 1680. He died 16 Nov., 1717. His birth date was found on the Newbury church records.

CHAPTER IV.

DESCENDANTS OF REV. JAMES² NOYES.

SECOND SON OF REV. JAMES¹.

MEMOIR OF REV. JAMES NOYES OF STONINGTON, CONN.

(From Bacon's Historical Discourses.)

He was the son of Rev. James Noyes, the first Teacher of the church in Newbury, Mass., who came from England. He was, in his day, one of the leading ministers of the colony, greatly respected for his wisdom and his piety.

He was a distinguished preacher, carrying uncommon fervor and Heavenly zeal into all of his public performances. His ordinary conversation breathed a spirit of that world to which he was endeavoring to guide his fellowmen. In ecclesiastical controversies he was eminently useful. He was a counsellor in civil affairs at some critical periods.

He was selected to be one of the first trustees and founders of the college (Yale); for though he was then an old man, and in a remote corner of the colony, his influence was deemed essential to the success of the undertaking.

(From Wheeler's History of Stonington, Conn.)

Rev. James Noyes came to Stonington to preach on an invitation of the town in 1664. The meeting house in which he preached was a short distance southwesterly of the present residence of Mr. Henry M. Palmer, west of Montauk avenue. Traditionally, we learn that he resided in the family of Thomas Stanton, Sr., until he was ordained, Sept. 11, 1674, and the next day he was married to Miss Dorothy, daughter of Thomas and Ann (Lord) Stanton. He made his permanent place of abode upon a large tract of land in Stonington, which he purchased of Samuel Willis of Hartford, Conn., where he erected him a dwelling house on the site of the present first house south of Anguilla, on the highway from there to Wequetequock, which became the first parsonage of the First Congregational Church of Stonington, where he lived the remainder of his life, dying Dec. 30, 1719. For the first ten years of his ministry he preached as a licentiate, and the last forty-five years as an ordained clergyman. He was Chaplain with Capt. George Denison's expedition that captured Canonchet, chief sachem of the Narragansett Indians, April, 1676.

(From La Verne W. Noyes' "Noyes and allied families.")

"In April, 1697, upon the motion of the Honorable Lieut. Governour Stoughton, and information that the enemy, Indians, intended to scatter into small companies, to do mischief upon His Majestie's subjects, the Governour and Councill also being moved by the worshipful Captain Samuel Mason and the Reverent Mr. James Noise, ordered a letter sent to Capt Samuel Mason and Mr. James Noise desiring them to promote of raising twentie or thirtie men, English and Indians, furnished with arms, ammunitiion and provision, to range the woods between Nashua (now in N. H.) and Deerfield, Mass., and near Mamerrimack River, and between Hadley and Marlborough as they shall judge best. And the Governour and Councill being informed that the enemy, Indians, intended to scatter and to sett upon the small towns upon the river that were secure. Warrants were sent to the several constables of the towns in danger to see that due watch and ward be kept." (Conn. Col. Record, Vol. 4, p. 196.) Appointed by Assembly one of a committee to settle differences regarding division of land in Quinnebang. In 1708 he was granted 200 acres of land.

The remains of Rev. James² Noyes are buried in the ancient burying-place ground, upon a sloping hill on the east side of Wequetequock Cove, midway between Stonington, Conn., and Westerly, R. I. A light-brown stone covers the remains, and upon it is cut the Coat of Arms of the family, as shown in the illustration.

The epitaph was written by Reverend Eliphalet Adams, who was pastor of the First Congregational Church of New London, Conn., in 1720.

The original draft of the epitaph is in the Sunday School Library room of the First Congregational Church of Stonington, Conn. Graduated at Harvard 1659. He drew Cedar Swamp lots for Indian war service.

16—THOMAS²—3. Son of James and Dorothy (Stanton), was born in Stonington, Conn., 15 Aug., 1679; married Elizabeth Sanford, 1705; died 26 June, 1755. He was Deputy to the General Court from 1713 to 1733. In 1723 he was commissioned Captain of the First Company, or Train Band of Stonington, and appointed Justice of the Peace. In 1725 he was one of a Committee to partition off the parish of Groton, and set up the worship of God there. Representative of the town of Stonington 1714-'15-'16-'17-'22-'23-'24-'25-'26 and Selectman during the same years.

The Colonial records show his appointment for militia service, as follows:— "This Assembly do establish and confirm Mr. Thomas Noyes of Stonington, to be Captain of the First Company or Train Band in the town of Stonington, and order that he be commissioned accordingly."

Miss Wheeler, in her "Old Homes in Stonington," refers to the home of 16-Thomas (as follows). "Capt. Noyes built this house after his marriage in 1705 to Elizabeth, daughter of Gov. Peleg Sanford and granddaughter of Gov. William Coddington of Rhode Island. He and his son James were Colonial officers. Capt. Noyes was a man of considerable property, and he it was, who sent to England and had the Coat of Arms cut upon a stone and placed over the grave of his father, our first minister, Rev. James Noyes, who was buried at Wequetequock. This house which he built, is set back from the road some little distance and impresses one with a grand hospitable air. It is large, square, unpainted, with a hip or quail trap rook, truly in style a mansion house. The broad front door has the old-fashioned iron ring for the knocker, with the small panes of glass over the top. From the front hall below, the stairs can be seen winding away into the upper story and again winding on into the garret.

The great east room seventeen feet square has the old-fashioned corner cupboard, where now can be found very beautiful and ancient crockery, not belonging to the Noyes family, but to the present occupants. The west side of the room is ceiled from top to floor, the width of some of the boards are beyond belief unless they are seen. The kitchen has the old styled dresser for crockery, and the summer beams show in all the rooms. Ah! could this house speak, what a history it would give of Revolutionary heroes, of whom Col. Peleg Noyes was one, being Captain at Fort Griswold in 1777. What stories of love and war, heartaches and sorrows borne patiently, and of lives lived out in their fulness and gone on into the unlimited beyond where all shall be satisfied. This place has long remained in the Noyes name from the time of Captain Thomas to the present when it now belongs to the daughter of Mr. George and Martha (Noyes) Noyes, Mrs. Orson C. Rogers." 17—JOHN^a—3. Son of James and Dorothy (Stanton), was born in Stonington, Conn., 13 Jan., 1685; married, first, Mary Gallup, 1715; second, Mrs. Elizabeth Whiting, 1739; died 17 Sept., 1751. His second wife was a great granddaughter of Gov. Bradford of Plymouth Colony.

[From Miss Wheeler's "Old Homes in Stonington."]

"Dea. John Noyes, brother of Capt. Thomas, built the house near Westerly, now known as the Moss house, in 1714. Dea. John's second wife was a great-granddaughter of Gov. William Bradford, second governor of Plymouth Colony. This house is large, with a square roof, and spacious rooms are on both floors. It has no cellar underneath, being built upon a ledge, though the cellar stairs go down the front hall and end upon a flat rock. This farm was included in the grant of land from the State of Connecticut to Thomas Stanton, the Interpreter General of New England, and by his will it was given to his son-in-law, Rev. James Noyes, and from him to his son, Deacon John, and to his son, Joseph Noyes, who lived and died there. He sold it to Nathaniel Palmer, and from him it descended to his son Luke, who lived here.

There were two race courses, eighty rods long, on the farm, where hundreds of people used to assemble to witness the races often held there. Still later Mr. Jesse Moss owned and renovated the house, so that it is now in good repair, and looks as if it would remain habitable a century more. Some of the land about the house has been sold within the past few years, so that the farm is reduced in size, but the new and commodious houses which have sprung up all about here, show that many homes have taken the place where used to be but one, which at the time this house was built was without neighbors. Mr. Moss was interested in making the land about the place beautiful to the eye as well as productive, and the broad and beautiful fields lying before the door will probably soon find a dividing line between them, where now the acres are without fence or wall, or even a stone upon their smooth surface." (There are so few descendants that no chart is necessary).

The descendants of 18—Rev. Joseph Noyes can claim royal descent through his wife, Abigail Pierpont, who was a descendant of Mabel Harlakenden, whose ancestry has been traced direct to William the Conqueror. The following is the line of descent of Abigail Pierpont from Mabel Harlakenden :—

John Haynes, Governor of Connecticut in 1639, and every alternate year thereafter (which was as often as the constitution permitted) to the time of his death; married Mabel Harlakenden. Their son, Rev. Joseph Haynes, married Sarah Lord in 1668. Sarah, their daughter, married Rev. James Pierpont. Abigail, their only child, married Rev. Joseph Noyes of Stonington, Conn. The following article concerning him is copied from a pamphlet published by Gen. Charles W. Darling, entitled "Memorial to My Honored Kindred."

REV. JOSEPH NOYES.

[From "Biographical Sketches," by Prof. F. B. Dexter.]

Joseph Noyes, the father of Mrs. Thomas Darling, was born in Stonington, Connecticut, July 4th, 1688, and was graduated from Yale in 1709. He was a son of the Rev. James Noyes, senior member of the original Board of Trustees of Yale College, and for over fifty years the minister of Stonington. In the History of Wallingford, Connecticut, by Dr. C. H. Davis, it is written that this family of Noyes belonged to a line of ministers, which, at the time of the decease of Rev. James Noyes, had existed during two hundred years in uninterrupted succession. The family is of Norman descent, and originated in England with William de Noyes, one of the followers of the Duke of Normandy in his Conquest of England in 1006. The family settled in Cornwall, England, in the reign of Charles I.

Joseph Noyes studied theology with his father, and was licensed to preach by the New London Association, May 2d, 1710. In September, 1710, he entered on a tutorship in college, which office he held for the five following years. His reputation at this time is indicated by an extract from President Stiles, given in the sketch of Phineas Fiske. In November, 1714, the pastor of New Haven—the Rev. James Piermont—was removed by death, and while the church was delaying the choice of a successor, Mr. Noyes received a call from Stonington (given in town meeting, April 14th, 1715), to become colleague-pastor with his father. This call he declined, and when the society at New Haven met, July 1, 1715, “to nominate a man to carry on the work of the ministry on probation,” Mr. Noyes received a majority of votes; but with the deliberation which was customary at that period, his ordination did not take place until July 4th, 1716, almost a year after he had entered on his pastoral labors. He preached his own ordination sermon from Jeremiah i: 7. In the first year of his ministry he was largely instrumental in promoting the removal of the College to New Haven, by his exertions in raising subscriptions; and when the college was actually settled there, he further aided it with means, and also by hearing for two years nearly all the recitations of the Senior Class. His last years were almost entirely withdrawn from public labors, and he died at New Haven, June 14th, 1761, in his 73d year.

The record on his tombstone, under the present First Church, is as follows: "Rev'd Joseph Noyes, a Man of God, eminent for Prudence, catholic in Sentiments, given to Hospitality, patient in Tribulation, and abundant in Labours; having serv'd his Generation by the Will of God, 5 years a Tutor, and 26 a Fellow, of Y. College, and 45 Pastor of y^e 1st Church in N. Haven, died June 14, 1761, Ætat. 73. Mrs. Abigail Noyes, Relict of the Rev'd Joseph Noyes, died at Wethersfield, y^e 10th of Oct'r, 1768, Æ. 73, and was Buried in that place. A Gentlewoman of a sweet and delicate Temper, and of Female Virtue an Example, she greatly excelled in y^e knowledge of y^e Scriptures, and they were y^e Guide of her Youth, and y^e Comfort and Support of her Age; she was a Loving, dutiful Wife, a Kind instructive Parent, to y^e poor Charitable, to y^e Faulty a faithful Re-prover, to the Cause of Truth a Friend. Her life was diligent and useful; Her Heaven began on Earth, She saw through a Glass darkly, but now Face to Face. O Grave where is thy Victory!"

"At an adjourned Town meeting held April the 14th, 1715, It was voted and agreed to call Mr. Joseph Noyes to be helpfull to the Rev. Mr. James Noyes in carrying on ye work of ye Ministry amongst us in this town, and that one of ye two Ministers shall preach to the People living remoat from the Meeting House at sum convenient Place where they, ye people agrieved shall unanimously agree upon, and that after the death, removal, or inability of either of the two ministers, to carry on ye work of ye ministry, or so soon after as the uper people shall so cause the Town to be divided into two Societies for carrying on ye work of ye ministry; And ye Town to be divided so as may be consistent with ye rule of justice and righteousness and the Northern Society when set out as above shall have an equal part of the ministry land, in this town and for incuragement of ye uper society, the lower society shall when divided as aforesaid, pay unto them the sum of one hundred pounds towards ye settling of a minister amongst them."

It was voted that if Mr. Joseph Noyes shall accept of a call of this town to be minister with his father the Rev. Mr. James Noyes, "that then ye town will give him, ye sd Mr. Joseph Noyes for his incuragement ye sum of one hundred pounds towards settling him amongst us and to pay him annually ye sum of seventy pounds as money so long as they ye sd Mr. James and Mr. Joseph Noyes shall carry on ye work of ye ministry amongst us in this town, and if it pleased God that Mr. Joseph Noyes shall succeed ye Rev. Mr. James Noyes, and doe continue to carry on ye work of ye ministry amongst us that then, he shall have his salloroy raised to make it a comfortable and credeble maintanance from this Town."—(Stonington Town Records.)

65—JOHN⁴—17. Son of John and Mary (Gallup), was born in Stonington, Conn., 22 May, 1718; married Mercy Breed, 1744; died

For many of the families of this line, and especially those now living in Morrisville and other Vermont towns, we are indebted to the late Horatio N. Noyes of Cleveland, Ohio. In 1889 he published a pamphlet giving the record of the direct ancestors and descendants of Joseph Clark Noyes, of Morrisville, Vt. The following is the preface :—

"After a hundred and fifty years of Colonial settlement, supplemented by a hundred years of National existence, it has become, in these later years, a pleasant pursuit of thoughtful persons, to search the records of the past to learn something of the origin and history of their ancestors.

The motive and spirit with which such researches are prosecuted in this country, is rarely in the expectancy, or even hope, of elevating some ordinary though respectable individual or family in the public consideration, by the possible discovery that some person bearing the family name was a knight in the army of William the Conqueror, and who consequently became a lord of vast domains, when the confiscated estates of the Saxtons were parcelled out; though necessitated, like the American Indian, to impress his totem, instead of writing his name—the original of the later “Coat of Arms”,—or of finding perhaps, their noble ancestor to have been a rich brewer and representative of a rotten borough, in an ancient parliament.

The inspiration that prompts societies and individuals to genealogical research in this country, springs from a nobler sentiment, even like unto that which we call patriotism, or love of birthplace, home or country, family affection, and reverential regard for the memory of ancestors.

Nevertheless, the reflection is gratifying, that in the long list brought to view in this record, no one bearing the name has been found wanting in moral rectitude; while several in the line, embracing a period of nearly three hundred years, have been eminent as clergymen and physicians, graduates of universities, deacons in churches, officers in civil and military life; and all manifestly excellent men and women, the heads of prolific families, and good citizens.

The genealogical compilation herein relates mainly to the direct ancestors and descendants of the late Joseph Clark Noyes, of Morristown, Vt., who was the son of Oliver of Hyde Park, Vt., the son of John of Stonington, Vt., the son of Deacon John of Stonington, the son of Rev. James of Stonington, the son of Rev. James of Newbury, Mass., the immigrant of 1634, who was the son of Rev. William Noyes, Rector of the Parish of Choulderton, county of Wiltshire, England, from 1602 to 1621, and whose wife was sister of Rev. Robert Parker, a Puritan and Nonconformist, driven to Holland, whose nephew, Rev. Thomas Parker, came to America in the same ship with Rev. James Noyes and settled in Newbury.

The compiler of this record, conscious that he not the right person in the right place in pursuing genealogical investigation, requiring peculiar qualifications which he assumes not to possess, and whose time is occupied in business affairs, has availed himself largely of the friendly aid of the late lamented Horace G. Cleveland, an accomplished gentleman and an expert genealogist, to whose industry these results are mainly due. His death a year since precluded the possibility of following out, as had been intended, the numerous branches of the ancient and venerable, yet thrifty, genealogical tree.

The "Reminiscences of an Nonagenarian," an exceedingly readable tale of early New England life, by Sarah Anna Emery, published at Newburyport, Mass., 1879, contains a fund of information relating to our immigrant ancestor, Rev. James Noyes, and of his numerous descendants in and around the original town of Newbury from 1634 to date. This book has been to me not only a lamp of historical light, but a photographic picture as well of domestic and social life in Colonial times.

We are likewise under obligations to R. A. Wheeler of Stonington, Ct., for information regarding Rev. James Noyes the second, who preached in that town for fifty years.

Our thanks are extended to Miss Nellie A. Noyes, of Newbury, Mass., for her contribution to family research, and Miss Mary Noyes especially for a recent photograph of the ancient family homestead, built in 1646, which has always been owned by some member of the family, and which she now occupies.

Our regrets for want of more extended research into the collateral branches of the Noyes family are materially lessened by the information received that at least two gentlemen are delving in the same historical mine, the output of which will be richer, we doubt not, than the shaft which we have worked. We trust they may be not a little aided by the historical notes herein made, and that the result of their labors will soon be published.

Benjamin⁶ (above) was for many years in command of a ship sailing between New York and the Mediterranean ports. At Leghorn he often entertained notable men. About 1819 he visited England for the purpose of obtaining a copy of the will of Attorney General William Noy, whom he thought was an ancestor. His friends at Leghorn gave him letters to persons of influence in London, which made it easy to accomplish his object, although it cost him sixty pounds. No application had been made by the heirs for the large fortune which was held by the Bank of England. Captain Noyes gave the copy of the will to his nephew, Oliver J. Noyes, in trust for his sons, but it was accidentally burned. He died at Staten Island, loved and regretted, aged sixty-seven years. At one time he owned a fine brig, which was seized and confiscated by the Mexican authorities, for having a quantity of tobacco on board not on his manifest. He made several fortunes, but lost all by unfortunate speculations.

133—THOMAS⁶—63. Son of Joseph and Barbara (Wells), was born in Westerly, R. I., 3 Oct., 1754; married Lydia Rogers, 1781; died 19 Sept., 1820. The following sketch of his service is an extract from an article in the Westerly Daily Sun of Oct. 20, 1895, written by his grandson, Charles P. Noyes.

THOMAS NOYES OF WESTERLY.

Among the graves of Rhode Island Revolutionary heroes, now being marked by the Rhode Island Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, is that of Thomas Noyes of Westerly.

Thomas Noyes was a great-grandson of Rev. James Noyes of Stonington, and also of Gov. Peleg Sanford of Rhode Island. Several of his ancestors were conspicuous among the founders of Rhode Island: William Hutchinson and his famous wife Ann Hutchinson, John Sanford, Gov. William Coddington, and Deputy Gov. James Barker. This is the stock from which he came. His father, Col. Joseph Noyes of Westerly, was, during the war, a conspicuous figure in Rhode Island State politics, was a member of the Assembly in May, 1776, and one of the supporters of the act then passed, known as Rhode Island's Declaration of Independence. He also served during the war as Colonel of the First Regiment King's county militia. His house was the military headquarters for that county. Such was the home and military environments of Thomas Noyes.

He was born Oct. 3, 1754, so had but reached the age of 21 when he received, in January, 1776, his commission as ensign, followed late in August by one from Congress as lieutenant. His service in the Continental army was as lieutenant in Capt. Arnold's Company, Col. Lippitt's Rhode Island regiment, and the following is a record of the service of the regiment during the time of his connection with it:

The Rhode Island General Assembly having already two regiments in the field, Hitchcock's and Varnum's, ordered, Jan. 18, 1776, another regiment of twelve companies to serve for one year. The command was first given to Col. Harry Babcock, but soon after he was relieved and Christopher Lippitt, the lieutenant colonel, was appointed in his stead.

The regiment was stationed at various points on the island and the shores of the bay during the spring and summer months, as protection against invasion, but were subject to the call of Congress. This call came Sept. 3, 1776, and they were ordered to join the main army under Washington. At that time the officers were:

Colonel—Christopher Lippitt.

Lieut. Colonel—Adam Comstock.

Major—James Tew.

Adjutant—William Tyler.

Quartermaster—Benjamin Bourne.

The commissioned officers in Capt. Arnold's company were:

Captain—Thomas Arnold.

Lieutenant—Thomas Noyes.

Ensign—Benjamin Bourne.

The original commissions of Thomas Noyes are still in possession of his grandson, Mr. Franklin B. Noyes of Stonington. The first is dated Jan. 18, 1776, as ensign, signed by Nicholas Cooke, governor, etc., of the English colony of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations in New England in America. The second is dated Aug. 26, 1776, as lieutenant, signed by John Hancock, president of Congress of the United Colonies. The third is dated May 29, 1777, as first lieutenant of artillery, signed by Nicholas Cooke, governor of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations. The fourth is dated May 7, 1792, as second major, signed by A. Fenner, governor of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations. The fifth is dated May 6, 1793, as first major, signed by A. Fenner. The sixth is dated May 12, 1794, as lieutenant colonel, signed by A. Fenner.

In 1808, when James Madison was elected, Thomas Noyes was one of the four presidential electors for Rhode Island who cast their votes for C. Pinckney of South Carolina for president and Rufus King of New York for vice president.

During and after the war he was active in public and political life, serving for about twenty years as a representative or deputy for Westerly, and as State senator. He was also a member of the celebrated Hartford convention.

He was chosen president of the Washington bank of Westerly in 1801, soon after its organization. At this time there were but few banks in Rhode Island, and it was a distinguished honor to be elected by his associates to this important position of honor and trust. He evidently filled it with great credit to himself, as he continued as president for about nineteen years, until his death, which occurred at Westerly, Sept. 19, 1819. The records of the bank show the following resolution of the board of directors, under date of Sept. 23, 1819:

"Voted, That the members of this meeting, in manifestation of their respect for the character and their sympathy and regret at the death of Thomas Noyes, Esq., late president of said Washington bank, wear crape on the left arm during the period of thirty days next ensuing the date hereof."

244—JOHN B.⁶—126. Son of Nathan and Lydia (Fellows), was born in Stonington, Conn., 1778; married Sarah Berry; died 5 June, 1854. He moved to Brookfield, N. Y., about Dec., 1802, and lived in a log house during the winter of 1805. In 1806 he lived in a house that was built for a corn house. It was very small for a family, but had to answer the purpose of a house. His next move was to what is now Sandisfield, Oneida county. He took a small grist mill to attend, on shares, to provide for his growing family. Church was held in a barn, and the "district school" was two miles away. He moved back to Brookfield and several years later moved to Pharsalia, and lived there two years. In 1812 he moved to Smyrna Hill; in March, 1813, he moved to Sempronius, N. Y. (now called Niles.) About 1820 he moved to Venice, N. Y., and later to Scott's Corners, N. Y., where he died.

719-Edward H.⁷ was much interested in the family history and has visited the Parish church at Choulderton, England, and presented it an altar cross (in 1891) suitably inscribed, as a memorial to his ancestor, Rev. William Noyes.

The following press notices of his death are copied:—

DEATH OF E. HERBERT NOYES.

"Norval," Brilliant Journalist, for Many Years Correspondent of the "National Hotel Reporter," has Written His Last Paragraph.

It is with keen regret and sincere sorrow that the editor of The National Hotel Reporter is compelled to announce the death of E. Herbert Noyes, which occurred at his residence in Milford, Pennsylvania, on Tuesday morning the 12th inst. Mr. Noyes had been in poor health for some time and had lived quietly with his family in the little town of Milford for several years, devoting himself principally to church work and literary pursuits.

Over the non de plume of "Norval" Mr. Noyes began writing for the hotel press more than twenty-five years ago, and during that lengthy period he has been almost continuously a valued contributor to the columns of the National Hotel Reporter. Mr. Noyes was the first editor of the Hotel Mail of New York City, a publication which passed out of existence several years ago. This paper was edited by "Norval" while it was under the proprietorship and management of W. Wallace Waugh, of Boston, who afterward sold it to Thomas E. Lonergan. The latter died in New York several years ago, but he had disposed of the Hotel Mail long before his death.

During the earlier years of its existence this weekly hotel journal became well-known throughout the country on account of the brilliant character of the writing done by its editor, one of the prominent features being a weekly letter headed "Saxon about Town," "Saxon" being a non de plume adopted by Mr. Noyes. After his retirement from the Hotel Mail and for many years previous to his removal to Pennsylvania, Mr. Noyes continued to reside in New York. During this entire period until a few weeks ago when he became seriously ill, Mr. Noyes continued to write almost exclusively for the National Hotel Reporter, and "Norval's Notes" have always been regarded by the editor of this journal, and by its readers as well, as one of its most valuable departments and features. Mr. Noyes' brilliant paragraphs will be sadly missed in these columns, for it is simply the truth to say that it will be impossible for us to fill his place. "Norval" had a style that was peculiarly his own, and it is not too much to say that he has never been surpassed among the newspaper writers of this country as a brilliant paragrapher and clever correspondent.

Mr. Noyes leaves a widow and one daughter to mourn his loss. He was possessed of many noble attributes and in all the relations of life he was the perfect embodiment of a consistent christian and a manly man. Peace to his ashes.

[From the Churchman, New York, May 23rd, 1903.]

EDWARD HERBERT NOYES.

Edward Herbert Noyes, a prominent resident of Milford, Penn., died at his home on the morning of May 12. Mr. Noyes was born in New York and lived the greater part of his life in that city. He was a graduate of the University and a member of the Seventh Regiment until he took up a residence in Europe. He was also a member of the New York Genealogical and Biographical Society and a member of Christ church parish up to the time of his death. During part of his residence abroad he was private secretary to the Hon. John L. Motley, the historian, when he was American Minister to the Court of St. James.

Mr. Noyes was a man of great ability, brilliancy and literary attainments, although not having continued to any great extent his literary work since becoming an invalid. A few years ago he came to Milford with his family for the summer—a continued residence being due to his admiration for the place and the climate. While there he took great interest in the Church of the Good Shepherd, and was a devoted supporter of it and its interests, being treasurer of the parish for several years.

He had an unusually large circle of friends among the clergy. He was a direct descendant of the Rev. James Noyes, a famous Colonial clergyman and author, one of the founders of Yale and its senior trustee.

Mr. Noyes's character was such as to make him universally admired and respected and to create a lasting influence for good upon all with whom he came in contact. He was noted for his hospitality, geniality and optimism. He leaves a wife, who was Miss Ella Baker, of Philadelphia, and one daughter. D.

DEATH OF EDWARD H. NOYES.

Edward Herbert Noyes (Norval), a brilliant paragrapher, died at his home in Milford, Pa., on May 12. He was born in New York and lived the greater part of his life there, the exceptions being travel and residence abroad. He was private secretary to John Lothrop Motley, the historian, when the latter was the American minister to England.

His literary and journalistic work covered a space of twenty-five years. Two piquant little volumes entitled Steamship Notes, opened his career, which was noted for its versatility and originality.

He was special correspondent of the New York Home Journal during Morris Phillips regime. His famous columns in the Sun, Mail and Express, Commercial Advertiser, Evening Post and Evening Telegram were read with enjoyment by the public for twenty years.

Mr. Noyes was the first editor of the Hotel Mail of New York, a publication which passed out of existence several years ago; also of Ocean, a breezy little magazine with too short a career, and the Gazette. He was correspondent for years of several London papers, including Tid-Bits and the Caterer, and was one of the first subscribers to The Fourth Estate.

Herbert Lincoln Noyes, fourth son of the Rev. Gurdon W.⁶ Noyes (Amherst Coll. 1846), and Agnes (McArthur) Noyes, was born in New Haven, (Fair Haven) Conn., Nov. 28, 1866.

He won distinction in Chemistry during his college course, and after graduation went to Leadville, Col., where he was employed as chemist by the Small Hopes Mining Co., and the Holden Public Sampling Co. successively. After three years he removed to Denver, and opened a private assay office with Henry E. Wood. But he had won an enviable reputation for skill and accuracy, and when the Philadelphia Smelting and Refining Co. opened their new works at Pueblo, he was offered and accepted the position at the head of their laboratory, in the largest lead smelter in the country, a responsible position for so young a man. After six months, the close labor and responsibility made a change necessary in the interests of his health, and he went to Mexico, in February, 1889, as the agent of a syndicate of American gentlemen engaged in the buying of silver ore. His offices were in the mining city of Guanajuato. Here he died Nov. 9, 1889, in the 23rd year of his age. He was unmarried. Blessed with a bright and cherry disposition, and attracting notice by his unusual talent, he made friends everywhere, from whom come many tributes to the worth and promise of the life so early cut off.

370—SAMUEL S.⁶—170. Son of John and Eunice (Sherwood), was born in Weston, Conn., 20 May, 1787; married Esther Chapman, 1812; died 19 Mar., 1877. He was licensed to practice medicine 1810. He settled in New Canaan, Conn., where his children were born.

728-Benjamin⁷ and Sarah N. (Bates) had children born in New Haven, Conn. :—

1051 JOHN B.⁸, b. 29 Aug., 1842; m. Helen B. Durgin, 1891.

SAMUEL ST. J., b. 14 Aug., 1844.

1052 CATHERINE ST. J., b. 17 Dec., 1849; m. Frank W. Guion, 1880.

ELIZABETH, b. 12 Feb., 1854.

SARAH E., b. ; d. 3 June, 1863.

728-Benjamin,⁷ second son of Samuel Sherwood Noyes and Esther Chapman, came to New Haven, Conn., in 1830, being then fourteen years of age. He took a clerkship in the College book store, conducted by General Howe. Doctor Noyes established his sons, William and Benjamin in this business upon the retirement of Gen. Howe, they adding a publishing department. Their youth, Benjamin being 21 and William two years younger, probably was the cause of their failure to maintain the business successfully. In 1838 Benjamin married Sarah Naomi Bates of Sharon, Conn., by whom he had five children, four of whom are living at this date. Mr. Noyes became early identified with all matters of public welfare and improvement in his adopted city. The first iron bridge structure, over Chapel street, was due to his energy ; the reorganization of the Chamber of Commerce, the creation by legislature of the office of insurance commissioner were results of his enterprise ; and he was made the first official in that position, holding before that, the office of bank commissioner, which widened his experience and reputation. In 1861-62 his personal efforts roused sufficient interest to secure from the legislature a charter for a street-car railway company. In recognition of this service to the public he was presented with an ebony, gold-headed walking stick, which bore this inscription : — "To Benjamin Noyes ; the father of Horse Rail Roads in Connecticut, from a few personal friends." A silver tray, with ewer and three goblets, was in later years presented him in appreciation of his efforts to secure better and more abundant water supply for the city, obtaining a charter for the "Fair Haven Water Co.," and building the "Mountain Dew Water Works," being supported in this enterprise by the counsel and financial aid of Mr. Caleb S. Maltby of New Haven. He was president of the Lincoln Campaign club, and on one occasion during the Civil war, went to Washington, D. C., to meet and escort to Connecticut a train of wounded soldiers, furloughed, that they might come North for state election. In New Jersey the train was abandoned by its crew, and there was fear of mob violence. Mr. Noyes went through the cars explaining the situation and calling for volunteers to take the train through to Connecticut. A new corps was organized and the train proceeded, the voters arriving in safety. The last important act of Mr. Noyes' life was of purely personal nature. He placed upon the north wall of Center church, New Haven, Conn., a marble tablet to the memory of his ancestor, the Rev. Joseph Noyes. (Contributed by Mrs. Catherine St. John Guion.)

918-James O.⁸, eldest son, born in Niles, Cayuga county, N. Y., June 14, 1829, and died at New Orleans, La., Sept. 11, 1872; married March 1, 1859, Kate Flint. He was graduated at Hamilton College in 1850, and at the medical department of Harvard in 1858. He then went abroad, continued his studies in the University of Vienna, visited Wallachia, and was appointed surgeon on the staff of Omar Pacha, the commander of the Turkish forces. He was afterward correspondent, in Turkey, Palestine, and Egypt, of the New York Tribune, Detroit Free Press, and other journals. On his return to New York he engaged in literary pursuits, and became proprietor and chief editor of the Knickerbocker Magazine in 1858. He went to Fort Monroe, Virginia, as a newspaper correspondent at the beginning of the civil war; engaged in various army contracts, and subsequently in planting. He settled in New Orleans after the war, was appointed commissioner of immigration for the State of Louisiana, and, in that capacity, revisited Europe. He was the originator of an enterprise for connecting the Mississippi river with the Gulf of Mexico by a ship canal below New Orleans, and of one for draining that city. At the time of his death he was an active member of the New Orleans Academy of Arts and Sciences. He published "Roumania" in 1857, and "The Gypsies" in 1858.

In 1864 he became superintendent of the Mexican and Gulf Ship Canal Co. In 1874 he returned to his native State and town, and removed to Auburn. After holding the position of supervisor eight years in Owasco, he was elected to the State Assembly by the Republicans of S. Cayuga District in 1878-9, re-elected 1882, 1890, and 1891, and served on the committees of public education, canals, railroads, state prisons, electricity, etc.

512—LEONARD R.⁷—244. Son of John B. and Sarah (Berry), was born in Sempronius, N. Y., 30 Dec., 1815; married Jane Jessup, 1837; died 27 Aug., 1891. He resided in Genoa, N. Y., until the fall of 1854, when he moved his family to Springville, Iowa, in a covered wagon, in which they had made the journey, and which served as their shelter for some weeks, as they could find no home to live in. He bought an empty log school house, one of the four houses which the town contained at that time, and sold it the next day, with the privilege of living in it until his house should be completed. With his home thus established, he began building an 18 x 24 story and a half log house on his farm. This was completed in January, 1855, he having got out all the logs with little or no help, loading them on to the wagon, three at a time, assisted only by the horses. The house was the best of its kind and generous in appearance; it sheltered the family well for nearly twenty-two years, when it gave place to the present residence. Mr. Noyes lived on his farm nearly thirty-seven years, during which time the face of the country changed from a wild, houseless, treeless prairie, to one of the richest and best farming sections in this or any other State, and became covered with artificial groves not equalled anywhere in number, beauty, or size. In this great work of tree planting he was the first and most active, and his influence contributed very largely to what has been done by others.

At the time of his death there was an elm and a maple among the eight hundred forest trees standing on his farm, which he planted, that were over thirty-three inches in diameter, thus showing that in middle life one may plant the forest tree and see it attain great size. * * * *

During the war of the rebellion Mr. Noyes was a staunch Union man, and when the southern sympathizers got too noisy in his neighborhood, he and a neighbor went to Marion and enrolled themselves in the Union League, which organization, as is well known, had a very quieting effect. Mr. Noyes' courage, energy and ability were never questioned. During his most active years he wrote frequently for the agricultural papers, and his articles were widely copied. His farm was noted, far and near, as a model of good husbandry, and on this account he was at one time, without his knowledge, strongly urged for the position of superintendent of the Iowa Agricultural College farm, but he would not accept the position. Though always a strong and active Abolitionist, Republican, and Prohibitionist, he neither sought nor held any political office. To the good judgment, serene life and perfect helpfulness of his wife he owed much of the success of his long life. She survived him nearly four and one-half years, and died on Tuesday morning, April 7, 1896, at the age of seventy-five years, three months and seventeen days, after a residence of forty-two years in Linn county. Directly after the death of her husband she moved to Central City, to make her home with her daughter, Mrs. William M. Giffen. These latter years were entirely free from care, serene and enjoyable to an unusual degree for a person of her age. She made many visits to her former home and friends in Cayuga county, New York, and often visited her son, La Verne W. Noyes, in Chicago. Those who knew her best say that she dealt gently with all, and was never heard to speak an unkind word of any one, while her influence over children was such that they would not quarrel in her presence. One might call her an apostle of peace; yet, to her country, she bravely gave up her eldest son. * *

District Attorney of Oneida County, removed to New York City, where he soon became one of the most prominent advocates at the N. Y. bar. He was a firm advocate of temperance, and devoted much time to addresses on that subject; L. L. D., Hamilton College, although not a graduate. He was a delegate to the Peace Convention in 1861. By his will he bequeathed his law library of over 60,000 volumes, to Hamilton College. He was very much interested in the family history, and made the first efforts of which we have any record, to ascertain the origin of the name, and early history of the family.

The following is an extract from an article in the "Masonic Advocate" concerning 735-Daniel Noyes:—

HON. DANIEL NOYES.

EXTRACT FROM A BRIEF SKETCH OF HIS LIFE, BY MORTIMER NYE, P. G. M.

Hon. Daniel Noyes was born at Poultney, Vt., June 27, A. D., 1830. His family was one of the oldest and most highly respected of the New England colony, and his ancestors, known historically as "Green Mountain Boys," assisted in the Revolutionary war for American independence.

When Judge Noyes was quite young his mother removed to Seneca Falls, N. Y., where the subject of this sketch attended the academy of that place, from which he graduated in 1843. In 1844 young Noyes entered Genoa College, and remained there as a student for three years. In 1847 he entered Union College at Schenectady, N. Y., and graduated therefrom with honors in 1848. He immediately entered the law office of Clark & Underwood, at Auburn, N. Y., as a student, where he remained, pursuing his studies of the law, until 1851, when he was admitted to the bar of the Supreme Court of the State by examination, in which he achieved great distinction.

In the spring of 1852 Judge Noyes started for the West, for the purpose of seeking a permanent home, and engaging in the practice of his profession. After visiting many towns on the prairies of Illinois and in the wilds of Wisconsin, he visited La Porte, which he soon selected as a home, and has resided there continuously to the present time. It took but a short time for him to achieve such distinction at the bar as to place him among the leading and most prominent attorneys of the northern part of the State.

Judge Noyes was elected mayor of La Porte for three several terms of two years each. He held the office of county attorney for years; was elected judge of the Court of Common Pleas, and served until that court was abolished by State legislation.

In November, 1876, he was elected judge of the Thirty-second Judicial Circuit, and has held the office continuously to the present time. His reputation as a judge is above criticism—honest, conscientious, intelligent, and possessed of the very highest executive ability. His decisions and conduct of the court's business command the respect of the bar and the most zealous regard of honest litigants, and of the people. It is a conceded fact that if he so desires he can again be elected to the office which he has so acceptably filled for the past eighteen years.

Judge Noyes has never been anxious to hold what are generally termed high offices. Often he has declined the congressional nomination, and has refused a position on the Supreme Bench. His sole ambition has been to stand high in the estimation of the better class of men in his section of the State, and to honorably and intelligently discharge every public and private duty.

Discharged Dec. 31st, 1898.

(From the Rochester Post and Express, Oct. 16, 1903.)

"The death of General Henry Taylor Noyes, a distinguished soldier and prominent resident of Rochester, occurred yesterday afternoon, at the family home, 283 Alexander street. Death followed a long and painful illness. Mr. Noyes was 65 years of age. Besides his wife, he leaves five children: Henry T. Noyes, jr., Miss Lua C., Katherine, and Edelweiss Noyes, of Rochester, and Selden G. Noyes, of Iola, Kan.; one sister, Mrs. E. C. Fish, and one brother, Milton Noyes, both of Rochester. Arrangements for the funeral have not been completed.

Henry Taylor Noyes was born on August 10, 1838, in Starkey, Yates county. He was the son of a farmer, and his early education was received in the district school. He afterward attended Starkey seminary, from which he was graduated when 16 years old. After graduating he taught school for a time, and then became surveyor, and later a student in the law school of Columbia College.

It was while young Noyes was a senior in the law school that war was declared between the North and South. He responded to the call to arms and enlisted with the One Hundred and Forty-eighth New York volunteers. He was commissioned an adjutant soon after joining the regiment, and in 1864 he was promoted to be inspector-general of the second division of the eighteenth army corps. While acting as inspector-general he served with General Martindale, a former resident of this city. He accompanied the Army of the James, and afterward the Army of the Potomac, in the campaign of 1864, and was honorably discharged from the service in 1865.

At the close of the war Mr. Noyes went to Michigan, where he became a factor in the lumber trade. He purchased great tracts of redwood in northern California, and remained in the West until 1870, when he removed to Seneca Falls, N. Y., where he became manager and part owner of the National Yeast Company. On Sept. 29, 1869, he was married to Miss Lu C. Chamberlain, of Seneca Falls, a daughter of the Hon. Jacob P. Chamberlain, who was a member of Congress in war times, representing the twenty-eighth congressional district, of which his son-in-law, Mr. Noyes, was later elected representative.

In March, 1879, Mr. Noyes was appointed lieutenant-colonel of the Forty-ninth regiment of the National Guard. In June of that year he was brevetted colonel, and in April, 1895, he was appointed commissary-general of subsistence of the state by Governor Morton. He was reappointed by Governor Black in 1897.

In politics General Noyes was a staunch Republican. While a resident of Seneca Falls, where he remained until 1891, when he moved to this city, he took an active interest in the affairs of the town, and was highly esteemed. He became president of the village in 1881, and in 1890 he was nominated for representative in Congress by the Republicans of the twenty-eighth congressional district. The result of the election caused a controversy that was carried to every court in the state, all of which affirmed his election.

Few men aside from the great generals of the civil war probably were as well known as General Noyes in military circles.

From 1883 to and including 1885, he spent the most of his time studying military science in Europe. He was a member of such military organizations as the United Service Club of the military order of the Loyal Legion, Military Service institution, a life member of the Society of the Army of the Potomac, and the Army and Navy Club, and was formerly a member of George H. Thomas Post, G. A. R., of this city. He was also a member of the Metropolitan Club, and was one of the oldest as well as one of the 100 life members of the New York Yacht Club. Of this fact Mr. Noyes was especially proud, as he had always been a devotee of yachting and was deeply interested in all allied subjects. He indulged his love of the sea at his beautiful summer home at Nantucket.

General Noyes was of Puritan and Huguenot stock, his family having been among the first exiles to Holland, some of its members later leading the party of Puritans that founded Newburyport, Mass. One of his forefathers became attorney-general of England, and was a well known writer of legal works. His ancestor, James Noyes, of Newburyport, became a professor in Harvard University in 1659, continuing in the work for half a century. His great-grandfather, Moses Noyes, was the first president of the board of trustees of Yale University.

General Noyes, after coming to Rochester, became interested in several large corporations, among them the German-American Button Company, of which he had been the president for the last four years."

DESCENDANTS OF JOHN² NOYES.

FOURTH SON OF REV. JAMES.

5—JOHN²—Son of James and Sarah (Brown), was born in Newbury, 4 June, 1645; married Sarah Oliver, 1671; died 9 Nov., 1678. He was made freeman in Boston, in 1675. July 27th, 1674, the selectmen voted, "John Noyse is prohibited to imploy his brother William Noyse as a cooper upon the penaltie of 10s. a weeke, havinge served but 4 1-4 yeares to the trade and not 21 yeares of age." He was second sergeant of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery company in 1678, and was constable in 1675.

Children, born in Boston :—

SARAH,³ b. 20 Aug., 1672.

*24 JOHN, b. 4 Nov., 1674; m. Susanna Edwards, 1699; d. 15 Mar., 1749

*25 OLIVER, b. 1675; m., first, Ann Belcher, 1699; m., second, Katherine E. Jeffries, 1719.

24—John³ and Susanna (Edwards) had children, born in Boston :—

JOHN, b. 26 June, 1706; d. 26 June, 1706.

SARAH, b. 18 Sept., 1712.

ABIGAIL, b. 21 May, 1716; d. 12 June, 1737.

24—John^s was fourth sergeant of the Artillery company in 1699, and its ensign in 1704. In 1704 he was elected a constable of Boston, but declined to serve, and paid the usual fine for not serving. He was a goldsmith by trade.

25—OLIVER^s—5. Son of John and Sarah (Oliver), was born in Boston, 1675; married, first, Ann Belcher, 1702; second, Mrs. Katherine E. Jeffries, 1718; died 16 Mar., 1721. Graduate of Harvard, 1695; A. M., 1721. He was a physician in Boston and Medford, but found time to manifest a deep interest in everything concerning the welfare of his native place. A local historian says: "He must have entered into public life and enterprise to improve his native town in early life; and from the magnitude of his undertakings resembled the great author of India and Central wharves, Broad, India, Market (now Cornhill), Brattle streets, and the Mildam, a solid causeway. He was one of the original projectors of Long Wharf, and the erection of that pier may justly be attributed to his enterprising spirit. The work was commenced soon after the great fire of 1711, which commenced in Capt. Ephraim Savage's house, in Williams court, and swept off both sides of Cornhill, part of Court (Queen) street, and State (King) street, to the dock, together with the Town House and the First Church, where Joy's building afterward stood. . . . He was of the party which followed the leadership of Elisha Cook (1699), one of the most active and prominent men of the time." He was one of the proprietors of "Pejepscott" (Brunswick, Topsham, and Brunswick, Me.), and "14 Sept., 1715, was given consent to take his lot of land next to 'Maquoit,' he promising to build a defensible house there the next spring." He was an officer of the Artillery company, 1699. He was selectman, 1708-1711, and from 1719 to 1721, and held other public offices. Representative to the General Court, 1714, '16, '19, and '29. The inventory of his estate in the county, not including valuable properties elsewhere, amounted to 17,198 pounds.

Children, born in Boston:—

6-Thomas was a prominent man in early colonial days. He was made a freeman 31 May, 1671; selectman, 1676-7; chosen constable 1679-80, but not wishing to serve, paid the usual fine of forty shillings. He served during the French and Indian wars in several different grades—captain, major, lieutenant-colonel, and colonel.

May 31st, 1684, Capt. Thomas Noyes of Newbury was ordered by Major Nathaniel Saltonstall of Haverhill "to provide a flight of colors for the foot company, ye ground field or flight whereof is to be green, with a red cross, with a white field in ye angle, according to the antient custome of our own English plantations in America, and our own practice in our ships and other vessels. The number of bullets to be put into the colors for distinction may be left out at present without damage in the making of them."

August 3d, 1705, Col. Saltonstall wrote to Lt. Col. Thomas Noyes, of Newbury, as follows :—

"Sir—By his excellency's express direction, I command you in her majesty's name forthwith to appoint and set forth one half of your command by name and have them ready, well fixt with arms, ammunitin, and ten days' provision, to march at an hour's warning. The command is strict."

Sept. 28th, 1705, Col. Saltonstall wrote again, as follows :

"I desire and order by tomorrow morning at farthest, you press and post at your block houses at Newbury twelve able soldiers, three at each of your block houses, to abide there night and day to watch."

In June, 1706, under commands from Col. Saltonstall to Col. Noyes, twenty able soldiers of the Newbury militia were sent to Haverhill, on July 5th, and when they appeared Col. Saltonstall wrote again, as follows :—

“I received your return of ye twenty men ye Governor commanded me to call for, and when ye persons (which I can't call men), appeared, even a considerable number of them, to be but boys, or children, and not fit for service, blind in part, and deaf, and cross-handed, I slept till I waited on ye Governor, ye twelfth instant, and upon liberty to speak to him, I, with ye Major, have taken ye best care we can to keep the men and children sent hither for the present, till I may have opportunity to tell you the queen likes it not to be served in this manner. But in one special, Nicholas by name, is blind and deaf and small, and not fit to be continued, and therefore, to be short, I sent Nicholas home to you, and do expect you will send some able man in his place, if you have an able one in Newbury. The other diminutives are sent out to garrison at present, or else you had met with them to return to you for a like exchange.

My heart if it speaks is full. I want a suitable time to tell you what I have to say on her majesty's behalf. Twelve BOYS for originally prest MEN, and they hired too. I know not ye irregularity of it. I shall be glad to see you, and intend to do it, either at Haverhill or Newbury, or a middle place, as you may desire, if I am able to attend to see what is right and what is our duty for us to do.”

Two weeks later Col. Saltonstall wrote again, as follows :

“One Smith came this day with two of his sons in order to get a release for John Danforth. I wonder how you concern yourself so much about this man to get Danforth home, and disregard your default, and have not yet sent a good man for that pitiful insufficient sick man Nicholas, whom I sent off ye 16th day of July last to you to send a better hand & he to return in two days time to me, but he is not yet come or other for him. Pray consider what lies at your door, and do not deal so unhandsomely with your patient friend and humble servant,

N. SALTONSTALL. to LT. COL. T. NOYES."

On account of Indian hostilities, the following order was issued, August 7, 1690:—

"These are in his majesty's name to require all the soldiers belonging to this towne to bring their arms and ammunition to ye meeting house every saboth day and at all other public meetings, and also they are required to carry their arms and ammunition with them into meadows and places where they worke, and if any man doe refuse or neglect his dewty as above expressed he shal pay five shillings for every such neglect.

(Signed) DANIEL PIERCE, Captain.
 THOMAS NOYES, Captain.
 STEPH. GREENLEAF, Captain.
 JONA. MOORES, Lieutenant.
 JACOB TOPPAN, Ensign.
 HENRY SOMERBY.

Thomas Noyes was selectman, 1683-4 and '85; tithing man in 1684; justice of the peace, 1700-1. May 6th, 1689, he was chosen one of a committee to consult with the Committee of Safety in Boston and consider with them what may be best for the conservation of the peace of the country." "Dec. 18th, 1699, Col. Danl. Pierce and Major Thomas Noyes were by vote desired and impowered to imploy ye Honrble Capt. Samuel Sewall of Boston, Esq., to procure a good and sufficient meeting hous bell for the Towne of Newbury suitable for our Towne considering ye remoteness of our dwellings." Oct. 18th, 1700, a committee was appointed to assign seats in the new meeting-house to the freeholders and inhabitants of the town, and it "was voted that Coll. Danl. Pierce, Esq., should have his first choyce of a pew, & Maj. Thomas Noyes, Esq., shall have the next choyce for a pew." "March 27, 1704, Coll. Thomas Noyes, Esq. (and others) were chosen to be a committee to lay out the High way to Bradford, &c." May 16, 1688, the General Court ordered that "Thomas Noyce be Captaine of the second company, * * * and that commissions goe out accordingly."

His estate inventoried 4460 pounds and two negro slaves. To his son Thomas he gave his silver-hilted sword, and to his son Stephen his brass-hilted sword.

July 23rd, 1688, Captain Thomas Noyes of Newbury bought of Daniel Pierce, Sr., in consideration of a promise his deceased father, Daniel Pierce, had made to Captain Noyes, as a portion with his daughter, viz. : 40 acres of meadow, being in or about the town of Woodbridge, in the Province of East New Jersey, or New Cesarea, bounded by or upon the meadow of Stephen Kent, Sr., on the east; by the meadow of the Lord Proprietor on the south, the upland in com. and swamp on the west, and by a parcel of upland granted by my said father on the north, which may more large appear by a patent dated September 10th, 1670. * * * Said Pierce also confirmed another promise that his father had made to Captain Noyes, viz. : To give him a farm of 100 acres on Slingtail Brook, in New Cecarea, or N. J.

BAINBRIDGE C., b. 8 Aug., 1822; d. 5 May, 1845.

A GREAT MUSICIAN.

Bainbridge C. Noyes, the first of the name, was the youngest son of Joseph and Elizabeth (Spofford) Noyes, and was born in Milford, Mass., Aug. 8, 1822. He came to Georgetown when a boy, and learned his art here. The writer well remembers his exercises on his favorite instruments mornings, noons, and evenings, in the old Phoenix Building, where he worked on shoes with his brothers, Hiram N., Alfred B., and Charles A. (Albert) Noyes. He died unmarried, May 5, 1845, at the early age of 22 years. His remains were among the first buried in Harmony cemetery. His grandfather on his mother's side was the celebrated architect and bridge builder, Jacob Spofford, associated with Timothy Palmer in building the Haverhill Rocks and Chain bridges. His grandmother was Mary Tenney.

The following is the article that has had circulation in all the musical magazines and many newspapers :

A musical journal, in an article on celebrated instrumental performers, speaks of a remarkable trombonist, who, a generation ago, attracted great attention at a concert in Boston, but whose name the writer is unable to recall. The musician in question was Bainbridge Noyes of Salem, whose rendering of the most difficult and rapid music on the unwieldy trombone was equal to that of Ned Kendall on the Kent bugle, or Arbuckle on the cornet. His favorite piece was 'Fisher's Hornpipe,' with unlimited improvised variations. Once, while visiting New York State, he was strolling over a muster field, he came across a brass band 'at ease' on the ground, and half unconsciously he picked up a trombone and tooted the scale, just to test its tone, and laid it down again. The owner, thinking to astonish a tyro, and perhaps, also, encourage him, by showing him to what excellence it was possible to attain, took up the instrument and played a popular march very creditably, he being more than an average performer, and looked to Noyes for signs of approval, who clapped his hands, exclaiming, 'Good! capital!' He then reached for the horn again and struck up 'Fisher's Hornpipe,' the members of the band staring in amazement, while the soldiers ran from all directions and gathered round the musician, whom they took for a veritable wizard. When he had finished the piece, with all the filling he could imagine, nobody cheered—they just looked at him, and when he handed back the trombone, the owner said in a surly tone, 'Keep the darned thing, I never'll blow it again.'—Georgetown Advocate.

EDWARD P.⁸, b. 21 Dec., 1865 ; Grad. Dartmouth, 1887 ; d. 27 Jan., 1899.

795-Edward F.⁷ has a fine record as a soldier and as a citizen. His parents having died in his infancy, at the age of thirteen he was apprenticed, by his guardian, as a printer in the office of the "Morning Star," a religious paper published in Dover, N. H., where he remained four years and a half, and then began preparing for college at Kingston Academy ; he entered Dartmouth in 1853 and graduated in 1857, ranking fourth in a class of fifty-seven. He then went to Cincinnati and studied law with E. M. Curwen, and graduated at the Cincinnati Law School, 1858, and began practicing law the same year, and was in the successful prosecution of his profession at the breaking out of the Rebellion July, 8th, 1861, his law office was changed to recruiting headquarters, and in less than a month a full regiment was raised, and ready for the field, he was commissioned as Major of the Regt. (39th Ohio Infantry). In this rank he served with the regiment during all its marches in Missouri, and during the campaign for the capture of New Madrid and Island No. 10. He took part in all the engagements of the left wing of our army at Corinth, and at Farmington. Upon the resignation of the Colonel and promotion of the Lieut. Colonel, he was commissioned Lieut. Colonel of his regiment 8 July, 1862, and took part in the battles of Iuka and Corinth.

He was commissioned Colonel of the Regiment Oct. 1st, 1862, vice Gilbert resigned; and commanded it until the beginning of the Atlanta campaign, in camp and in engagements, and in building railroads in Tennessee. While on this latter duty the subject of veteran reenlistments became prominent, and with a quick perception of its necessity, Col. Noyes threw the whole weight of his influence into the work of re-enlisting his regiment; and as a result, the 39th Ohio re-enlisted a much larger proportion of veterans than any other Ohio regiment.

He took an active part in the Atlanta campaign, being at the battles of Resaca, Dallas and Kenesaw Mountain. July 4th, 1864, while in command of an assault on the rebel works near Ruff's Mills he received a wound which resulted in the loss of a leg. After partial recovery from two amputations, and while still on crutches, he reported for duty, and was assigned to command Camp Dennison, where he remained until April 22d, 1865, when he resigned to accept the position of City Solicitor for Cincinnati, to which he was elected while absent in the field.

He was elected Probate Judge of Hamilton County, Oct., 1866. He was recommended for the grade of Brigadier General by Gens. Pope, Rosencrantz, Stanley, Dodge and Sherman; and after being disabled for active service he was appointed Brevet Brig. General, Mar. 13, 1865. (From "Ohio in the Civil War.")

Gen. Noyes was subsequently Governor of Ohio 1872-4, minister to France 1877-80, judge of the Sup. Court, Cincinnati, 1889-1890.

819-Francis G.⁷ was a graduate of Harvard, 1856. He served in the civil war as Captain and A. C. S., U. S. Vols., 1862. Promoted Lieut. Colonel and Chief C. S., 13th Army Corps, until October, 1865, when he was mustered out. Practiced law in Clinton, Iowa, 1856, with N. B. Baker, formerly Governor of New Hampshire. The following article is copied from a local newspaper notice of his death:—

NASHUA, Dec. 2, 1902. Col. Frank G. Noyes, a well-known citizen, died at his home in Noyes block, Monday afternoon, at 3:10. His demise was sudden, and was due to congestive apoplexy, which, in turn, is said to have been superinduced by a fall received some days ago.

Frank G. Noyes was born in Nashua, July 6, 1833. He was the son of Col. Leonard W. and Anne Sewall (Gardner) Noyes. He was fitted for college at Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., and entered college in 1849, graduating in 1853. Colonel Noyes read law in the offices of Rufus Choate and Sidney Bartlett, in Boston, and attended lectures at the law school at Harvard University. He graduated from Harvard with the degree of LL. B., in 1856, and was admitted to practice in the courts of Massachusetts and New Hampshire. Immediately thereafter he settled in Clinton, Ia., and formed a copartnership with Nathaniel B. Baker, ex-governor of New Hampshire, remaining in active practice of law until the opening of the civil war.

He was commissioned aide-de-camp on the staff of Governor Kirkwood of Iowa. During the year that followed he had an active part in organizing troops, and then President Lincoln commissioned him commissary of subsistence, with the rank of captain. He went to the front at once, and served throughout the war, participating in most of the battles in the important campaign in the West and Southwest, among which were Shiloh, Helena, Yazoo Pass, and Vicksburg.

After the capture of Vicksburg he went to New Orleans with the Thirteenth Army Corps, to which he was attached, and was engaged in the fight of Mobile Bay, when Farragut made his famous passage of the forts.

In the May following he was ordered to Galveston, Tex., where he served as chief of his department on the staffs of Generals Granger and H. G. Wright, when he was honorably discharged, in November, 1865.

Having been promoted by the President to be chief commissary of subsistence, Thirteenth Army Corps, with rank of lieutenant-colonel, in March, 1867, he was appointed consul to Panama, and in 1868 he returned to Iowa, where he was engaged in manufacturing until 1879, when he returned to Nashua. After his return to Nashua he gave up the practice of law and devoted his time to the care of his property.

He was mustered into John G. Foster post, G. A. R., in 1889. In 1891 he served as inspector in the state department of the Grand Army. In 1892 he was elected senior vice department commander of New Hampshire, and at the 26th annual encampment, in 1893, he was chosen department commander. He also served on the staffs of General Alger and General Veazey, commanders-in-chief of the national encampment, in 1890 and 1891. In 1891 he was elected president of the New Hampshire Veterans' Association. He was one of the early members of the military order of the Loyal Legion, and had been a companion of the New York commandery for over thirty years.

Besides his connection with the Grand Army, he was a Free Mason. He was a man of thorough executive ability, and was much respected by his friends and colleagues. He was a prominent speaker, and many times he had been heard throughout the State.

Colonel Noyes was united in marriage, Nov. 20, 1856, with Hannah E. Richardson, of Lowell, Mass. The children who survive him are Anna Gardner, wife of Sheridan P. Reid, ex-consul of Tien Tsin, China; Clara L. H., Grace Richardson, and Elizabeth.

215-Nathaniel⁵ and Sarah (Emery) had children born in Salisbury, N. H. :—

- 439 MARY E.⁶, b. Sept., 1811; m. Alfred J. Kittredge, 1832; d. 24 Dec., 1891.
 NATHANIEL E., b. 18 Apl., 1813; d. 25 May, 1899.
 SARAH, b. 1810; d. 1812.
 SARAH, b. 1815; d. 1819.

215-Nathaniel⁵ settled in Salisbury, N. H., about 1790, was a carpenter, also had a store. He took the contract to build Dartmouth College and walked to Hanover with his tools on his back. In 1793 he paid a tax on his goods of $50, and in 1808 on $2,000.

Nathaniel E.⁶ (above) was a millionaire, as shown by his executors in the following article from the Haverhill Gazette :—

"BEQUESTS OF LATE NATHANIEL NOYES ARE EXECUTED.

Heavy Tax Upon the Estate is Borne by Residuary Legatees.

Judge Ira A. Abbott and Miss Sarah Kittredge, the executors of the will of the late Nathaniel E. Noyes, yesterday forwarded the checks for the bequests to local institutions which were made in the will of the deceased. The amounts forwarded and the institutions were: Hale hospital, $20,000; Public Library, Old Ladies' Home Association and the Children's Aid Society, $10,000 each. The deceased left an estate valued at $1,100,000, and the legacy tax upon the estate amounted to $3,000. Under the will the various legatees would have had to share this tax proportionately, but it was assumed by the residuary legatees so that the public legatees received their bequests in full.

Mr. Noyes had no connections in this city, save that gained by spending the summers in this vicinity with his relatives. In spite of his wanderings in foreign lands, he evidently had a tender spot in his heart for the Massachusetts city to which he returned to die.

The deceased was born in Salisbury, N. H., April 18, 1813. He was the son of Nathaniel and Sarah Emery Noyes and grandson of Rev. Nathaniel Noyes.

He attended Groveland Academy and Phillips Exeter Academy but gave up his studies to learn the wholesale hardware business in Boston. Later he removed to Baltimore, Md., where in company with the late Mr. J. H. Stickney, he carried on the same business.

He retired while still a young man and travelled extensively when foreign travel was far less common than at present. He often spoke of travelling through Spain on horseback. He resided in Paris for 20 years, making occasional visits to the United States. For about 20 years he had been in this country, spending the winters in Baltimore and Florida and the summers with his sister, the late Mrs. Mary E. Kittredge, and his niece, Miss Sarah N. Kittredge, in this city.

He was a modest, upright man, decided in his opinions and of rare business ability. An extensive reader, he was well informed on all subjects, a gentleman of the old school, but so simple and retiring that in his latter days he made few friends. Perhaps for this reason he retained a greater regard for his kindred and the old friends remaining. To these he was ever an agreeable and instructive companion, a genial and hospitable host."

The following article from a newspaper published about four years ago, concerning Joseph S. Noyes, is interesting. He is one of the few survivors of his generation who have answered circulars and furnished data for our genealogy.

MARRIED SIXTY YEARS.

Joseph S. Noyes Has Lived to Laugh at Two Physicians' Predictions.

WEST NEWBURY, May 7.—Joseph S. Noyes, who is one of the oldest residents of this town, delights in telling the story how his application for life insurance was rejected just forty-seven years ago. At that time he resided in Salem, Mass., being engaged in the grocery business with his brother. He was 35 years old, but the examining physician rejected his application, as he stated that Mr. Noyes was liable to become a consumptive. He is now aged eighty-one, and is unusually active for his years.

With his wife Sarah, he lives on the main street in the town, having occupied his present residence for the past twenty-four years. Mrs. Noyes is six months her husband's senior, and does not enjoy as good health as he. Besides being among the oldest residents in the town, the couple enjoy the rare distinction of having attained their sixtieth wedding anniversary.

This came April 25 last, but it was not formally celebrated, owing to Mrs. Noyes' ailments. The couple are both natives of West Newbury, and a strange coincidence is that their mothers' maiden names were Sarah Chase, though they were not relatives. Mr. Noyes was a son of Enoch and Sarah (Chase) Noyes, and is the last of a family of nine children, six boys and three girls. He was born Dec. 19, 1817. Mrs. Noyes was the only child of Moses and Sarah (Chase) Brown, being born June 20, 1817.

Mr. Noyes suffers slightly from deafness, but otherwise enjoys perfect health. Mrs. Noyes, excepting a physical disability, is well preserved, and daily attends to the household duties.

They were married April 25, 1839, by Rev. John Q. Edgell.

The day before his marriage Mr. Noyes started for Boston, intending to return the following afternoon. In those days the only conveyance was coaches, and it was late in the evening when he returned. The wedding ceremony was arranged for the early evening, and as Mr. Noyes had not returned during the afternoon, his bride and the guests invited to the wedding became anxious lest the wedding would have to be postponed.

It was only a few minutes before the time set for the ceremony that Mr. Noyes returned, and donning his wedding clothes, hastened to join his bride. The aged couple in these days, when grooms and brides disappear on their nuptial day, laughingly recall the incident.

The couple had three children, one dying in infancy. Their two sons, Moses B. Noyes and Joseph O. Noyes, reside in this town, the former living near the home of his parents, and Joseph residing at home. They are both civil war veterans. Their father, when the call for volunteers was issued by President Lincoln, responded; but was rejected on the physical examination, the physician stating that he was subject to heart failure.

While now enjoying perfect health, and being very active, Mr. Noyes loves to recall that and the other incident of his having been rejected by the medical examiner of the life insurance company, believing that even physicians may err.

Excepting for a period of six years, while Mr. Noyes was engaged in business in Salem, the couple have resided in their native town. Mr. Noyes, when aged seventeen, accepted the alternative of learning a trade rather than continuing his education, and was apprenticed to the shoe business. After serving his apprenticeship, he was employed in shoemaking for a few years, and went to Salem in 1848, where he was engaged with his brother, Alanson W., in the grocery business. In 1854 he returned to West Newbury, and with another brother, Enoch W., purchased a grocery store, continuing in business four years, when the store was sold.

Since then he has engaged in farming, though in recent years he has led a retired life, yet still assisting in the work about his premises. When questioned about his politics, he said that one of the proud facts of his life was that he had never voted for a Democrat. "I have always," said he, "been a Republican since that party was formed, and previous to that was a Whig. My first presidential vote was cast for William Henry Harrison, and I have always voted in the presidential elections since then."

Mr. Noyes was once elected town collector, though he has always had an aversion to holding political offices, and feels proud in the fact that the records show that his was the only term during which the year's taxes were entirely collected the same year.

A year ago the couple mourned the death of a dear friend, Charles Sawyer. The latter's widow, Mrs. Abigail (Brickett) Sawyer, is still living, and with Mr. and Mrs. Noyes shares the honor of being numbered among the oldest West Newbury residents. Mr. and Mrs. Sawyer were married the same day that Mr. and Mrs. Noyes plighted their troth, and until the death of Mr. Sawyer each couple exchanged visits on their wedding anniversaries.

(No record of any other Noyes descendants has been found).

After a short visit Peter Noyes went back to England well pleased, and returned to this country the next year in the "Jonathon" with several friends and Nicholas, Dorothy, Abigail, Peter, all probably his children. He was one of the first settlers of Sudbury,—one writer says "probably the first Englishman who built a habitation west of the then boundary of Watertown"—one of the most prominent and wealthy men of the town, one of the commissioners to lay out and divide the town as we see by the following order dated Sept. 4, 1639. "The order of the general court upon the petition of inhabitants of Sudbury is that Peter Noyes, —, Walter Haynes — have commission to lay out lands to the present inhabitants according to their estate and persons, etc." There were three divisions of land — 1639, April 20, 1640 and Nov. 18, 1640, and his share was 16-32 and 24 acres. Freeman May 18, 1640. Selectman — years. (Savage says 18 years, Farmer says 21 years). Appointed Deputy to Genl. Court May 18, 1640, Oct. 7, 1641 and May 22, 1650. Deacon of first School. Appointed "Surveyor of arms" at Sudbury, May 18, 1640—"to order small cases under 20 shillings" at Sudbury, Oct. 7, 1640 (and various other dates). "Also is appointed by this court to joine such persons in marriage as have been published according to order at Sudbury affores'd" May 18, 1648. His will dated the day preceding his death (22 Sept., 1657) mentions all his children except Nicholas; his wife's name was Abigail.

His son, Thomas,² was a prominent man in the colony, one of the principle surveyors, and often called on to lay out farms in Sudbury and adjacent towns. He was a selectman for twelve years, and was authorized to marry in Sudbury; was called Ensign as early as 1658, and Lieutenant in 1665; he was second in command under Capt. Hugh Mason, whose company was ordered to march against the Dutch at the "Monhatoes." In pay for his service in this campaign he was granted 250 acres of land in what is now Worcester.

He also owned land in Newbury as shown from a deed recorded 20 Sept., 1656. "Know all men by these presents, that I Thomas Noyes of Sudbury in New England, in the County of Middlesex, yeoman, — have instituted, ordained & put in my place my trusty, and well beloved friend Nicholas Noyes of Newbury, gent, and Robert Long, of Newbury, weaver, in Essex County, in New England, my true and careful attorneys, to ask, recover, and fence, or to let the lands and house at Newbury which were sometimes the house and lands of Henry Fay." In his will he mentions wife, brothers and sisters, but no children.

At the May session of the Gen. Court in 1666, "Left. Thomas Noyes of Sudbury, John Parker of Billerriky, and Left. Challice of Salisbury Newtowne, were appointed a committee to run the bounds of the town of Haverhill & to make returns to the next session of the court." They submitted the following report:—"In obedience to an order of the General Court, dated 23 May 1666, Thomas Noyes of Sudbury, Lieftenant Challice of Salisbury, Newtowne & John Parker of Billerriky, did meet at Haverill the 31 day of Oct., 1666, to run the bounds of Haverill according to an order committed unto us. Wee began at the meeting house and runne a due west line to Merrymacke River & started a due north line from the saide heap of stones to meet with and close the line north-west from the bound of the Merrimac River that divides between Haverill & Salisbury, which bound is just two miles and fourteen score poles, from Haverhill meeting house which lyeth east, north east, & there wee cease our work at that time for want of the order wherein that line was prefixt between Salisbury & Haverill, from the said bound at Holt's Rocks; then the said committee did appoint to meet again to finish the work about the bounds, upon the first day of May next following, this work was done by Thomas Noyes, deceased, & refused to be submitted unto by Lieftenant Challice being left alone to make his return, to the honored Court, by him who is your servant wherein you shall command.

(Signed—JOHN PARKER.)

The Court approved this report in the following words—
“The Court doe approve of this return, of the bounds of Haverhill, as farr as the same was stated by Ensign Noyes & rest of the committee, appointed unto before the death of Ensign Noyes.”

Joseph², son of Peter, was a merchant in Charlestown, in 1660. In a letter received at the Probate Court with a will dated Dec. 31, 1659, proved 2nd of April, 1661, he mentions brothers Thomas and Peter of Sudbury, and sister Abigail, so this must be the son of Peter, and not the Joseph Noyes of Sudbury after 1662 (who married Mary Darvell) as some writers claim. He died in Barbadoes.—See Hist. Gen. Register, Vol. 47, page 72.

Peter², son of Peter, was made a freeman 7 May, 1673; Representative 1679-1691. He must have been firm in his opinions, as in 1688, he took out two old benches from the meeting house and put in a new one on his own responsibility, for which he was severely censured by the selectmen, and ordered to replace the benches: which he did not do, so it was finally settled in town meeting by the following order—
“Ordered that ye pew shall stand there; and that Mr. Peter Noyes’ three youngest daughters together with the daughter of Deacon Haynes, and Mary, Capt. Brown’s daughter, and Susan, Capt. Grout’s daughter shall set in the new pew, and that they do give up their rights to ye other seats in ye meeting house.”

He left no will, and as his children did not agree upon the division of the estate, the court appointed their uncle Josiah Haynes with two others, to divide it for them, and in their return they say “Having met divers times, using all means that we know of to persuade said children to agree among themselves, they being all of them of full age, but all to little purpose," etc. The inventory made a total of 1558 pounds. He owned a corn and saw mill, which was probably the one mentioned in Vol. 68, page 224, Mil. papers, where we find reference to "Mr. Noies mill in Sudbury where there were thirteen or fourteen of Capt. Wadsworth's company (part wounded) from the Sudbury fight."

[From the History of Sudbury.]

"Peter Noyes was one of the number who offered themselves to travel for one month with horse and weekly to fetch and return preachers for the supply of the town at least every Lord's day. (1678.)

In 1699 the town chose a committee to receive a donation given by Mr. Peter Noyes late of Sudbury, to the poor of the town. The donation consisted of his mill. After the town took possession of this it was leased a number of years to Mr. Abraham Wood; on the town records is the following reason for granting it.

Whereas the town taking into consideration the gift that Ensign Peter Noyes hath given to ye poor of oure towne namely ye mills commonly called by the name of ye New Mills with ye land and privileges belonging to ye same and being sensible that ye letting of it yearly will be a means to bring ye mills and houses to decay and in time be utter ruine in which will be a great loss and wrong to oure poore and that will not answer ye end of ye towne donor therefore, in respect to both (him) and your own good which is involved in ye same, we therefore vote grant liberty to them that are concerned as to ye disposal of said gift to dispose of it gains as they shall see fit for ye benefit of and in behalf of ye poore of ye tow ne of Sudbury, dated March ye 19, 1700." * * * In 1728-9 it was voted to sell the mills and give the town the money, as the heirs of the donor had laid claims to a considerable part of his gift; lawsuit had commenced and the town voted money to defend the property, the town therefore voted to sell the same for the sum of 700 pounds. The money was to be put on interest for the use of the poor and to be disposed of by the selectmen and ministers, March 13, 1728-9.

It is now apparent that there are no Noyes descendants of Peter¹ Noyes, unless they are descended from his grandson, Peter³ the only son of Peter². In Vol. 47. N. E. Hist Gen. Register page 73, is an article copied from an old Ms. written by John Haynes (born 1684); referring to the children of Peter² Noyes he says, "Peter (3) went to England 1697; died of small-pox in London, unmarried."

There are quite a number of our name who are sure that they are descendants of Peter of this line; but it is quite certain that there are no Noyes descendants of this Peter. There are Noyes descendants of 42-Peter⁴ Noyes (a great grandson of Rev. James,¹ Noyes) of Sudbury and as this name and that of Joseph² (all of Sudbury) are found on the town and church records, it is easy to understand how they were confused, both names being common to two different families, having no known common ancestor.

CHAPTER X.

MILITARY AND NAVAL SERVICE.

PATRIOTIC SOCIETIES, ETC.

The poem on the dedication page tells of

"The men whose unrecorded deeds
Have stamped this nation's destiny.

Fortunately all the deeds that determined our destiny were not unrecorded ; but, as the poem says, the great majority lie in country graveyards, with no record to recall their deeds except

"The tottering slabs of slate, Whose tribute moss and mould efface;"

and although theirs may not be the names that give the right of membership in the patriotic societies, still the most of them, in their day and generation, bore their share of the trials, troubles and tribulations incident to the building of the States ; some in an humble way, but none the less meritorious, because they had not the greater opportunities that came to others. A descendant of one branch of those recorded in this Volume was anxious to join a patriotic society, but could find no soldier ancestors, most of them having been clergymen ; and had to find a Revolutionary ancestor in the maternal line. But he had a paternal ancestor who has a record for service in Indian wars, and would probably have had a revolutionary record had he been living then. One of our correspondents informs us that she was admitted to one of the societies, on account of his services to the Colony; had he been of the fifth generation, no doubt all his descendants would be eligible to all the patriotic societies, for the same reason.

The war service recorded in these volumes, in the family records, have, as a rule, been contributed by the parties who served, or their relatives. All service of which any official record has been found, is given in this Chapter and in Chapter VIII of Vol. I.

Having been a soldier in the regular army for nearly half a century, Col. Noyes naturally takes an interest in the service records of those of our name, and only regrets that he has not as complete records of all who have served their country as he has of his own service. Some (if not many) who served in the civil war will not find their services recorded; but the reason why some records could not be obtained will be given later. For the benefit of future generations, all such services should be recorded in full on the blank pages after the last chapter of each volume; the time will come when such records will be priceless. The records given in this chapter are simply indications to guide descendants to their patriot ancestors, and inform them where to look for more records.

PATRIOTIC SOCIETIES.

The following societies are recorded in the World Almanac for 1903: Founders and Patriots, Colonial Wars, Cincinnati, Sons of the Revolution, Sons of the American Revolution, Aztec, War of 1812, Loyal Legion, Grand Army of the Republic, Foreign Wars, Indian Wars, Medal of Honor, Naval Order, Sons of Veterans, Army and Navy Union, Navy Veterans, Veterans of the Spanish American War, and many minor societies, too numerous to mention.

The soldiers of the Spanish war have organized several societies, some skirmish or locality serving as a basis of organization. According to recent newspaper accounts, these various societies are trying to consolidate; if successful, it is to be hoped that the new society may select a more appropriate name, omitting the word "Veteran," as the majority of members are young men, compared with real veterans of the Mexican and Civil wars; the incongruity is most noticeable at Grand Army reunions.

G. A. R.

The Grand Army of the Republic is too well known to need any description; not a village too small nor a town too new, that has not its Post, or at least a representative of this, the great order organized from the veteran patriots of the Civil War. In the natural order of things it has passed the high water mark in its membership, and in a few brief years its members will no longer be able to turn out for the annual reunion; already many of them have to ride in carriages on such occasions, and even that concession to their years or wounds seems to gall some of them. Their sons have formed a junior order, and will soon take the places of their fathers in the annual reunions.

The Veterans of the Navy also have their organization, similar to that of the Army, but of course much less in number than the latter, but none the less enthusiastic in their spirit.

THE LOYAL LEGION.

The "Loyal Legion" (Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States), like the Society of the Cincinnati of the Revolution, limits its first-class membership to Commissioned Officers of the Civil War.

PREAMBLE.

We, officers and honorably discharged officers of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps of the United States, whose names are hereto annexed, having aided in maintaining the honor, integrity and supremacy of the national government at a critical period of its history, and holding in remembrance the sacrifices in common made and the triumphs together shared in discharge of this sacred duty, unite to ordain and establish a permanent association for the purposes and objects set forth; and to this and pledge our honor, as officers and gentlemen, to be governed by the following Constitution and By-Laws.

ARTICLE I.

TITLE.

This association shall be known as The Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States.

ARTICLE II.

PRINCIPLES.

This Order acknowledges as its fundamental principles :—

First. A firm belief and trust in Almighty God, extolling Him under whose beneficent guidance the sovereignty and integrity of the Union have been maintained, the honor of the flag vindicated, and the blessings of civil liberty secured, established, and enlarged.

Second. True allegiance to the United States of America, based upon paramount respect for and fidelity to the national constitution and laws, manifested by discountenancing whatever may tend to weaken loyalty, incite to insurrection, treason, or rebellion, or impair in any manner the efficiency and permanency of our free institutions.

ARTICLE III.

OBJECTS.

The objects of this Order shall be to cherish the memories and associations of the war waged in defence of the unity and indivisibility of the republic; strengthen the ties of fraternal fellowship and sympathy formed by companionship-in-arms; advance the best interests of the soldiers and sailors of the United States, especially of those associated as companions of this Order, and extend all possible relief to their widows and children; foster the cultivation of military and naval science; enforce unqualified allegiance to the general government; protect the rights and liberties of American citizenship, and maintain national honor, union, and independence. * * *

SOCIETY OF COLONIAL WARS.

The General Society of Colonial Wars was organized on May 9 and 10, 1893, in the Governor's room, City Hall, New York, by delegates from five States and the District of Columbia. A constitution was adopted on May 10, 1893, and the general officers elected, but the amended constitution was unanimously adopted at the New Netherland, New York city, on Dec. 19, 1893.

CONSTITUTION—PREAMBLE.

Whereas. It is desirable that there should be adequate celebrations commemorative of the events of Colonial history happening from the settlement of Jamestown, Va., May 13, 1607, to the battle of Lexington, April 19, 1775:

Therefore, The Society of Colonial Wars has been instituted to perpetuate the memory of those events, and of the men who, in military, naval, and civil positions of high trust and responsibility, by their acts of counsel, assisted in the establishment, defence, and preservation of the American Colonies, and were in truth the founders of this nation. With this end in view, it seeks to collect and preserve manuscripts, rolls, relics, and records; to provide suitable commemoration or memorials relating to the American colonial period, and to inspire in its members the fraternal and patriotic spirit of their forefathers, and in the community, respect and reverence for those whose public services made our freedom and unity possible.

MEMBERSHIP.

Any male person above the age of twenty-one years, of good moral character and reputation, shall be eligible to membership in the Society of Colonial Wars, who is lineally descended in the male or female line from an ancestor:

(1) Who served as a military or naval officer, or as a soldier, sailor, or marine, or as a privateersman, under authority of the Colonies which afterwards formed the United States, or in the forces of Great Britain which participated with those of the said Colonies in any wars in which the said Colonies were engaged, or which they enrolled men from the settlement of Jamestown, May 13, 1607, to the battle of Lexington, April 19, 1775; or

(2) Who held office in any of the Colonies between the dates above mentioned, either as

(a) Director-General, Vice-Director-General, or member of the Council, or legislative body in the Colony of New Netherlands;

(b) Governor, Lieutenant or Deputy-Governor, Lord Proprietor, member of the King's or Governor's Council, or legislative body in the Colony of New York, New Jersey, Virginia, Pennsylvania, and Delaware;

(c) Lord Proprietor, Governor, Deputy-Governor, or member of the Council, or of the legislative body in Maryland and the Carolinas;

(d) Governor, Deputy-Governor, Governor's Assistant, or Commissioner to the United Colonies of New England, or member of the Council, body of assistants, or legislative body in any of the New England Colonies.

One collateral representative of an ancestor such as above specified shall be eligible to membership, provided there be no existing lineal descendant, and provided that such person be the oldest collateral in the male line of such ancestor, or has filed with the Secretary-General of the Society written communications from all other persons having nearer claims to representation.

The General Society consists of the State Societies which have been duly organized and authorized by the General Society, and all regular meetings of the General Society shall be termed "General Assemblies," and shall be held once in three years. The officers of the General Society shall be a Governor-General, a Deputy Governor-General, a Secretary-General, a Deputy Secretary-General, a Treasurer-General, a Deputy Treasurer-General, a Register-General, a Historian-General, a Chaplain-General (who shall be an ordained minister of a Christian church), a Chancellor-General (who shall be a lawyer duly admitted to the bar), and a Surgeon-General (who shall be a practising physician).

The Great Seal of the General Society shall be : Within a beaded amulet, a title scroll. "1607, General Society of Colonial Wars, 1775," and in base the motto, "Fortiter Pro Patria," surrounding diaper charged with nine mullets. Over a shield surmounted of the crown, bearing American Colonial Seals, quarterly of nine : I., Virginia; II., New York; III., Massachusetts; IV., New Hampshire; V., Connecticut; VI., Maryland; VII., Rhode Island; VIII., New Jersey; IX., Pennsylvania.

The insignia of the Society shall consist of a badge, perchant by a gold crown and ring, from a watered ribbon one inch and a half wide, of red, bordered with white, and edged with red. The badge shall be surrounded by a laurel wreath in gold, and shall consist of :—

Obverse. A white enameled star of nine points, bordered with red enamel, having between each star point a shield displaying an emblem of one of the nine original colonies; and, within a blue enameled garter, bearing the motto, "Fortiter Pro Patria," an Indian's head in gold relieve.

Reverse. The star above described, but with gold edge, each shield between the points displaying a mullet, and in the centre, within an amulet of blue, bearing the title, "Society of Colonial Wars, 1607-1775," the figure of a Colonial soldier in gold relieve. The reverse of the crown of each insignia shall bear an engraved number, corresponding to that of the registered number of the member to whom each insignia has been issued.

The insignia shall be worn by the members on all occasions when they assemble as such, for any stated purpose, or celebration, and may be worn on any occasion of ceremony. It shall be worn conspicuously on the left breast. * * * * The flag of this Society shall consist of the red cross of Saint George on a white field, bearing in the centre the escutcheon of the General Society, surrounded by the crown and surrounded by nine stars. Each State Society has its own rules and regulations in regard to initiation fees, which in some States is (25) twenty-five dollars.

THE SONS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

The Sons of the American Revolution have a National Society, and also State Societies in nearly every State in the Union. The State Societies have their respective by-laws, and regulate their affairs subject to the sanction of the National Society. The State Society of Massachusetts was organized 19 April, 1889.

The objects of the Society are to perpetuate the memory and the spirit of the men who achieved American independence, by the encouragement of historical research in relation to the Revolution, and the publication of the results, the preservation of documents and relics of the individual services of Revolutionary soldiers and patriots, and the promotion of celebrations of all patriotic anniversaries; to carry out the instruction of Washington in his farewell address to the American people, "to promote, as an object of primary importance, institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge," thus developing an enlightened public opinion and affording to the young and old such advantages as shall develop in them the largest capacity for performing the duties of American citizens; to cherish, maintain, and extend the institutions of American freedom; to foster true patriotism and love of country, and to aid in securing for mankind all the blessings of liberty.

* * * * *

INITIATION FEES AND DUES.

The initiation fee shall be three dollars ($3.00); the annual dues two dollars; or the payment at one time of twenty-five ($25) dollars, shall constitute a life member, with exemption from payment of dues thereafter.

The annual dues shall be payable on the first day of April in each year.

HOW TO BECOME A MEMBER OF THE SONS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

Any person may be eligible to membership in this Society who is a male above the age of twenty-one, and is lineally descended from an ancestor who assisted in establishing American independence during the war of the Revolution, either as a military or naval officer, a soldier or a sailor, an official in the service of any of the original thirteen colonies of the United Colonies, or States, or of Vermont, a member of the Committee of Correspondence, or of Public Safety, etc., or a recognized patriot who rendered material service in the cause of American independence.

Blank forms for application for membership will be furnished by the secretary of any State Society, Sons of the American Revolution. The applications are to be made out in duplicate, or if the applicant desires membership in a local chapter, in triplicate, and forwarded to the secretary of the State Society, or to the secretary of the local chapter. In the application is set forth the line of descent from and the service rendered by the ancestor through whom eligibility is claimed, together with a memorandum of the authority for the statement of service, and an affidavit as to the line of descent, etc. Supplemental blanks are furnished when it is desired to claim eligibility through more than one ancestor; but no charge is made for filing supplemental applications.

* * * * *

The military or civil services of an ancestor must invariably be certified to by the proper officials, either of the State in whose service the ancestor was, or of the General Government, except that in cases where the service can be found in such publications as will hereafter be mentioned. When original warrants for land granted for military service, commissions, discharges, muster rolls, certificates of membership in the order of Cincinnati, etc., are available, such papers, or duly certified copies, are accepted as proof of service.

SONS OF THE REVOLUTION.

The Society of the Sons of the Revolution was instituted in New York, 22 Feb., 1876, re-organized 4 Dec., 1884, and incorporated under the Laws of the State of New York, 3 May, 1884.

The General Society was organized at Washington, D. C., 19 Apr., 1890, "to perpetuate the memory of the men who, in the military, naval and civil service of the Colonies and the Continental Congress, by their acts or their Counsel achieved the independence of the country, and to further the proper celebration of the anniversaries of the birthday of Washington, and with prominent events connected with the War of the Revolution; to collect and secure for preservation the rolls, records and other documents relating to that period; to inspire the members of the Society with the patriotic spirit of their forefathers; and to promote the feeling of friendship among them."

The General Society is divided into State Societies, who shall regulate all matters respecting their own affairs consistent with the general good of the Society subject to the provisions of the General Society.

"Any male person above the age of twenty-one years, of good character, and a descendant of one who, as a military, naval or marine officer, soldier, sailor or marine in actual service, under the authority of any of the thirteen Colonies or States or of the Continental Congress, and remaining always loyal to such authority, or a descendant of one who signed the Declaration of Independence, or of any one who, as a member of the Continental Congress or of the Congress of any of the Colonies or States, or as an official appointed by, or under the authority of any such legislative bodies actually assisted in the establishment of American Independence, by services rendered during the War of the Revolution, becoming thereby liable to conviction by treason, against the Government of Great Britain, but remaining always loyal to the authority of the Colonies or States, shall be eligible to membership in the Society."

"The Secretary of each State Society, shall transmit to the General Secretary, a list of the members thereof, together with the names and official designations, of those from whom such members derive claim to membership; and thereafter upon the admission of members in each State Society, the Secretary thereof shall transmit to the General Society information respecting such members similar to that therein required."

The Society shall have an insignia, which shall be a badge suspended from a ribbon by a ring of gold; the badge to be elliptical in form with scalloped edges, one and one-quarter inches in length, and one and one-eighth inches in width, the whole surmounted by a gold eagle with wings displayed inverted; on the obverse side a medallion of gold, in the centre, elliptical in form, bearing on its face the figure of a soldier in Continental uniform with musket slung; beneath the figures 1775; the medallion surrounded by thirteen raised gold stars, of five points each upon a border of dark blue enamel. On the reverse side, in the centre is a medallion corresponding in form to that on the obverse, and, also in gold bearing on its face the Houdon portrait of Washington, in bass-relief, encircled by the legend, "Sons of the Revolution;" beneath, the figures 1883; and upon the reverse of the eagle the number of the badge to be engraved; the medallion to be surrounded by a plain gold border conforming in dimensions to the obverse; the ribbon shall be dark blue, ribbed and watered, edged with buff, one and one-half inches wide, and one and one-half inches in displayed length. This insignia of the Society, shall be worn by the members on all occasions when they assemble as such for any stated purpose or celebration, and may be worn on any occasion of ceremony; it shall be carried conspicuously on the left breast, but members who are or have been officers of the Society may wear the insignia suspended from the ribbon around the neck. * * * * * The Seal of the Society shall be one and seven-eighths inches in diameter, and shall consist of a figure of a Minuteman in Continental uniform, standing on a ladder leading to a bell-fry; in his left hand he holds a musket and an olive branch, whilst his right grasps a bell-rope; above the cracked Liberty Bell issuing therefrom a ribbon bearing the motto of the Society, "Exegi monumentum are perennius"; across the top of the ladder, on a ribbon the figures 1776; and on the left of the Minuteman, and also on a ribbon, the figures 1888; (the year of the formation of the Society), the whole encircled by a band three-eighths of one inch wide; thereon at the top thirteen stars of five points each; at the bottom the name of the General Society, or of the State Society to which the Seal belongs.

The State Societies are incorporated under the laws of their respective States, and provided with a Constitution and By-Laws, to regulate all matters respecting their own affairs; duties of the officers, rules of admitting members, annual meetings, initiation fees and dues, etc. The initiation fee varies in different societies, in Mass. "it shall be five (5) dollars; the annual dues five (5) dollars provided that any member who shall have been elected during the last three months of the fiscal year shall not be required to pay the annual dues of the current fiscal year. The payment of fifty (50) dollars at one time shall constitute the life membership. The payment at one time of one hundred (100) dollars shall constitute a perpetual or endowed membership and upon the death of a member so paying the membership shall be held by his eldest son, or from such other descendant from the ancestor from whom he claims, as he may nominate; in failure of nomination having been made the society may decide which one of the descendants shall hold the membership, provided always, that the Society reserves to itself the privilege of rejecting any nomination that may not be acceptable to it."

LADIES' SOCIETIES.

The ladies have several Patriotic Societies: Colonial Dames, Woman's Relief Corps, Daughters of the American Revolution, Daughters of the Revolution, U. S. Daughters, Daughters of the War of 1812, etc.

SOCIETY OF COLONIAL DAMES OF AMERICA.

The National Society of Colonial Dames of America is composed of State Societies "of which there shall be one in each of the thirteen Original States, and one in the District of Columbia, and, there may be an associate Society in any of the non-colonial states by and through the consent of the National Society." Fourteen Societies now (1908) form the National Society.

PREAMBLE.

Whereas:—History shows that the remembrance of a Nations' glory in the past stimulates to national greatness in the future, and that successive generations are awakened to truer patriotism, and aroused to nobler endeavor, by the contemplation of the heroic deeds of their forefathers; therefore the Society of the Colonial Dames of America has been formed, that the descendants of those men who in the Colonial period by their rectitude, courage and self denial, prepared the way for success in that struggle which gained for the country its liberty and constitution, may associate themselves together to do honor to the virtues of their forefathers, and to encourage to all who come under the influence, true patriotism, built on a knowledge of the self-sacrifice and heroism of those men of the Colonies who laid the foundation of this great nation.

ARTICLE II.

"The objects of the Society shall be to collect and preserve manuscript, traditions, relics and mementos of by-gone days; to preserve and restore buildings connected with the early history of our country; to diffuse healthful and intelligent information concerning the past; to create a popular interest in our colonial history, to stimulate a spirit of true patriotism and a genuine love of country; and to inspire upon the young the sacred obligation of honoring the memory of those heroic ancestors, whose ability, valor, sufferings, and achievements are beyond all praise."

"State Societies shall be composed entirely of women who are descended in their own right from some ancestor of worthy life who came to reside in an American Colony prior to 1750, which ancestor or some of his descendants, being a lineal descendant of the applicant, shall have rendered efficient service to his country during the colonial period, either in the founding of a Commonwealth, or of an institution which has survived into importance, or who shall have held an important position in the Colonial Government, or who by distinguished service, shall have contributed to the founding of this great and powerful nation."

"All service which constitutes a claim to membership must have been rendered before July 5, 1776, but this date shall be held to include all the signers of the Declaration of Independence."

The State Societies shall regulate all matters respecting their own affairs consistent with the general good of the Society.

* * * * *

"No person shall be eligible to the New Hampshire Society unless she be a resident of New Hampshire or unless she derive her eligibility through one or more New Hampshire ancestors.

Applicants for membership in N. H. Society when claiming descent from a Colonial ancestor must show that the ancestor held one or more of the following offices :

The recognized Historic Founders of the Colony of New Hampshire.
Corporators named in the Charter of Charles the Second.

The charter members of the Incorporated Colonies.

Governors under the English.

Governors.

Deputy Governors, sometimes called Lieutenant Governors.

King's or Governor's Council, sometimes called Assistants.

Treasurers and Secretaries of the Province.

Manager General.

Marshals of the General Court or High Sheriffs.

Commissioners of the confederated service of the four New England Provinces.

Commissioners in Land Office.

Commissioners to the Indians appointed by the Colonial Government.

Commissioners to treat with other Provinces, or on boundary of Provinces.

Receiver General.

Provincial Agents to send to the British Government on public business.

Speaker, Clerk and Representatives of Provincial General Courts or Assemblies.

Members of the Committee of the Pay-table.

Preachers of Elective Sermons and titled Clergymen who rendered distinguished service in New Hampshire prior to 1750.

Members of Provincial Congresses.

Members of Continental Congresses.

Committee of Safety and Correspondence.

Physicians distinguished for skill and patriotism prior to the Battle of Lexington.

Signers of Declaration of Independence.

Judges of the Court of Chancery.

The Justice or Judges of all Courts of Records in the Colony.

Attorney and Solicitor General.

Clerks of Court of Records and Registers.

Judges of Admiralty Courts, and Clerks of the same.

Charter Trustees of Dartmouth College.

Members of the Board of War.

Members of the Navy Board.

Commissioned Officers of the Regular Colonial and Provincial Military and Naval forces.

All Revolutionary services rendered by Colonial ancestors, or by descendants of Colonial ancestors prior to July 4, 1776, may be added under supplementary details. No applicant is eligible under Revolutionary record alone."

"Candidates for admission shall in every instance, be invited and proposed by one member and seconded by another member of the Society, to whom the candidate must be well known, and by whom she shall be recommended. Upon the death of a member, one of her descendants—preferably in the line of her eldest child, and in case of no descendants, some relative of the same line of descent on which the deceased entered the Society—may be admitted to membership provided she is acceptable to the Society. Each member of the Society shall inform the Registrar who will be her heir, and the Registrar shall keep the record of the same. At the death of any member, the Registrar shall ascertain if such heir is of age to apply for membership in the Society. If she is not old enough to be received nor old enough to be entrusted with the care of the badge, "as an heirloom to be held, not worn," the Registrar shall be given the name of the guardian who has charge of the same, the State Society holding itself ready to redeem any badge which may be offered at any time."

The initiation fee shall be ten dollars, the annual dues five dollars. The payment of fifty dollars shall entitle the person to life membership, and the payment by any member of three hundred dollars shall constitute a perpetuity fee for herself and for one of her descendants.

The Custodian of the insignia shall be the National Registrar, who shall issue the badge to all members of the State Societies. The badge shall consist of a round disc with a centre of light blue enamel and the figure of a Colonial Dame in gold modeled in relief on the same. Around the center of the blue enamel shall be a circle of white enamel, with the title of the Society, "National Society of Colonial Dames of America," in gold letters, flush. Surmounting this shall be the modeled figure of an eagle in gold, and diverging from the disc twenty rays in gold, arranged in four groups of five each, the three center rays in each group to be surmounted by stars of blue enamel, these with a similar star placed immediately below the central disc, being emblematic of the thirteen original States. On the reverse side of the badge shall be the motto "Vertutes Majorum Filias Conservant." The materials of the badge shall be 14-karat gold and enamel, and it shall be worn suspended by a silk ribbon of blue and yellow from a gold bar on which is the name of the State.

This ribbon shall be one and one-half inch wide, the central section of blue being one inch, with a section one-quarter of an inch wide on each side.

The badge shall be worn by the members on all occasions when they assemble officially for any stated purpose or celebration, and may be worn on any occasion of ceremony. It shall be carried conspicuously on the left breast, but members who are or who have been National officers may wear it suspended from the ribbon around the neck.

The Seal of the National Society shall be : Within a beaded amulet a title scroll bearing the inscription, "National Society of the Colonial Dames of America."

Within the scroll a shield, surmounted of the crown, quarterly of four—

I. Quarterly, one and four azure, three fleurs-de-lis or, two and three gules, three lions passant, guardant in pale, or, for England.

II. Azure, three fleurs-de-lis, or, for France.

III. Azure, billette, a lion rampant, holding in his dexter paw a naked sword, and in his sinister paw a sheaf of arrows, or for, Holland.

IV. One and four (Sweden modern) azure three open crowns, or, two or three (Sweden ancient) azure, three bendiets sinister, wavy, argent, over all a lion rampant, or crowned gules, for Sweden.

This Seal to be used on the certificate, for further authentication, and with it the signatures of the National President and National Secretary.

DAUGHTERS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

The National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution was organized in the city of Washington, in the parlors of the Strathmore Arms, Oct. 11, 1890, the anniversary of the discovery of America by Columbus. The Society was incorporated under the laws of Congress, June 8, 1891, with 818 charter members, amended 1895. In 1903 this Society records 30,000 members.

The objects of the Society are :—

(1). To perpetuate the memory and the spirit of the men and women who achieved American independence by the acquisition and protection of historical spots and the erection of monuments; by the encouragement of historical research in relation to the Revolution and the publication of its results; by the preservation of documents and relics, and of the records of the individual services of Revolutionary soldiers and patriots, and by the promotion of celebrations of all patriotic anniversaries.

(2). To carry out the injunction of Washington, in his farewell address to the American people, "to promote, as an object of primary importance, institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge," thus developing an enlightened public opinion, and affording to young and old such advantages as shall develop in them the largest capacity for performing the duties of American citizens.

(3). To cherish, maintain, and extend the institutions of American freedom, to foster true patriotism and love of country, and to aid in securing for mankind all the blessings of liberty.

ELIGIBILITY.

The requisite for eligibility to membership is proven lineal descent from an ancestor who, with unfailing loyalty, rendered material aid to the cause of Independence as a recognized patriot, as soldier or sailor, or as a civil officer in one of the several Colonies, or States; or from the mother of such a patriot, provided the applicant shall be at least eighteen years of age and acceptable to the Society.

The Seal of the Society shall be one and seven-eighths of an inch in diameter, charged with the figure of a dame of the Revolutionary time sitting at her spinning-wheel, with thirteen stars above her, the whole surrounded by a rim containing the legend, "Daughters of the American Revolution, 1776-1890," and the motto, "Home and Country."

The insignia of the Society shall consist of a badge, in the form of a spinning-wheel and distaff, to be worn on ceremonial occasions upon a bow of ribbon. The wheel is seven-eighths of an inch in diameter and of gold, with thirteen spokes and a field of light-blue enamel upon its rim, bearing the name of the Society in letters of gold. Upon its outer rim, opposite the ends of the spokes, are thirteen small stars, which may be set with precious stones at the discretion of the owner. Underneath the wheel is a golden distaff one and one-half inches long, filled with silver flax. Upon the back of the wheel the registration number of the owner shall be engraved, and her name may be added. The ribbon to be worn with the wheel is dark blue, with a white edge ribbed and watered, following the colors of Washington's staff. A rosette of the prescribed ribbon attached to a stick-pin may be worn as an informal badge upon ordinary occasions. The initiation fee is three dollars, and annual dues two dollars. Twenty-five (25) dollars constitutes a life membership.

DAUGHTERS OF THE REVOLUTION.

The Society of the Daughters of the Revolution was organized September, 1891, and incorporated under the laws of the State of New York. The objects of this Society shall be to perpetuate the patriotic spirit of the men and women who achieved American independence; to commemorate prominent events connected with the war of the Revolution; to collect, publish and preserve the rolls, records, and historic documents relating to that period; to encourage the study of the country's history ; to promote sentiments of friendship and common interest among the members of the Society, and to provide a home for and furnish assistance to such Daughters of the Revolution as may be impoverished, when it is in its power to do so.

Any woman shall be eligible to membership in the Daughters of the Revolution who is above the age of eighteen years, of good character, and a lineal descendant of an ancestor who

(1) Was a signer of the Declaration of Independence, a member of the Continental Congress, or a member of the Congress, Legislature, or General Court of any of the Colonies or States ; or

(2) Rendered civil, military or naval service under the authority of any of the thirteen Colonies or of the Continental Congress ; or

(3) By service rendered during the war of the Revolution became liable to the penalty of treason against the government of Great Britain ; provided that such ancestor always remained loyal to the cause of American independence.

Election to the National Society shall constitute the person elected a member of the State Society where such exists, or when such shall be organized in the State of her residence.

The Seal of the Society shall be as follows : " Within a circle two and one-half inches in diameter, a beaded amulet, the title " Daughters of the Revolution, 1776-1891," and a rope ring, all surrounding a shield ; paly of thirteen argent and gules, a chief azure. Crest : an eagle displayed holding in the dexter claw an olive branch, and in the sinister a branch of thirteen arrows, all proper. Below the eagle and extending in curves to sinister a scroll, bearing the legend, " Daughters of the Revolution." Motto, " Liberty, Home and Country, 1776-1891."

The insignia of the Society shall be a badge of gold and blue enamel, and shall consist in design of a shield bearing the thirteen stars and stripes, above which is the ribbon bearing the title of the Society, "Daughters of the Revolution"; crossing the lower part of the shield is the ribbon with the adopted motto, "Liberty, Home and Country", with the dates, "1776-1891." Surmounting all this is the eagle, with outstretched wings, and grasping the olive branch and arrows, all of gold. The extreme length is one and one-fourth inches, and the extreme breadth one inch. The reverse of the badge shall be plain, and have inscribed upon it the name and number of the owner. The badge shall be suspended from a ribbon of buff edged with dark blue, ribbed and watered, one and one-half inches wide and one and one-half inches in displayed length, and when worn by a member of a State Society may be suspended from a gold bar bearing the name of the State. The insignia shall be worn by members on the left breast, but members who are or have been officers of the General Society may wear the insignia suspended from the ribbon around the neck. This insignia shall not be varied by any State Society or Chapter, nor shall these devise any additional insignia, and no member shall wear any other of the Daughters of the Revolution than this described, it being the aim of the Society to have one uniform badge, national, and not local, throughout the extent of our common country. Members may have a pin displaying the colors of the Society to wear on all times not connected with meetings or celebrations.

The initiation fee shall be two (2) dollars, and the annual dues shall be three (3) dollars, while a payment of fifty (50) dollars shall constitute a life membership.

The Woman's Relief Corps, affiliated with the Grand Army of the Republic with similar objects in view, like the G. A. R., is too well known to require any description.

The feminine descendants of ancestors of other wars have also organized similar societies, with similar objects.

As stated in the introductory chapter, an effort was made to procure from the War Department in Washington, copies of all records of military and naval service rendered by those of our name, for which the necessary expense of copying was guaranteed. Not being successful in that effort, other methods had to be adopted, with results that are all too slight to satisfy the authors, for several reasons; the principal one being the great expense incident to getting the records from forty-five states,* most of which sent men of our name to the wars in which the country has been involved since 1860. As there was but little emigration from the New England states before the Revolution, we have secured quite complete records of the names, etc., of those of our name who served in the Revolution, from the New England States records, and have nearly two hundred such records; about half of which have been determined as to their ancestry, giving their descendants the assurance that they are eligible to membership in the patriotic societies. Many of the records gave no place of residence or enlistment, or other data which would assist in fixing their ancestry, and in many cases were evidently additional records of those of the same name whose ancestry has been determined. It is probable that at least three-fourths of all who had Revolutionary service, have been identified. All these have their serial numbers prefixed for those records in Volume I, and following the names are the serial numbers for Volume II.

*The General Register of the Sons of the American Revolution states that the officials of some of the states charge three dollars for a copy of war service record; others charge two dollars for the search, and a dollar more for a certificate of service; and some charge only one dollar for the search and copy of record. The best way to procure copies of such records, is by application to the Chief of Record and Pension Office, Washington, D. C., as provided by the official order on the subject, a copy of which is given in this chapter.

WAR DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON, D. C., February 23, 1897.

ORDERS :

The muster rolls and other records of individual officers, enlisted men and organizations which are on file in the Record and Pension Office of this Department and which pertain to the War of the Rebellion, the Mexican War, the various Indian Wars, the War of 1812 and the War of the Revolution, have become so dilapidated through years of constant handling, or other causes, that it has been found necessary to adopt stringent measures for their preservation, and to restrict reference to them to cases in which such reference is absolutely necessary. Many of the most important of those records have been reproduced by the index-record system, but the handling of these cards, as well as the original records which they represent, by persons not thoroughly instructed in their use and not under the control of this Department, involves great danger of the loss, through misfiling or otherwise, of cards or other records which cannot be replaced. For these reasons, as well as for others equally cogent, the Department is compelled to restrict access to both the original records and the index-record cards exclusively to persons who are in the employ of the Department and are lawfully subject to its control.

The Department will furnish at any time such information relative to any individual officer or enlisted man as its records affords, and as may be actually necessary to enable the proper officials of any State, or any relief association, patriotic society or other kindred organization, to pass upon any application that may have been made in good faith for aid, relief or membership, and that may properly come within the jurisdiction of such officials or organization. But requests for information relative to individual officers or enlisted men, or for the compilation of statistical or other data relative to particular organizations, to be used for historical or memorial purposes, or for publication, cannot be entertained, because the limited clerical force allowed by law is insufficient to enable the Department to comply with such requests without serious interference with more important current work.

The records of general historical value pertaining to the late war have either been published, or soon will be published, in the "Official Records of the Union and Confederate armies," so as to render them accessible to all who may be interested in them. Should Congress provide in future for a similar publication of the records relating especially to individual officers, enlisted men and organizations of that war and prior wars, the historical data which those records contain will also become available for general use, but until such publication shall have been authorized, or other legislation enacted it will be impracticable for the Department to furnish compilations or statements from those records for historical, memorial or statistical purposes, or for publication.

For the reasons set forth above, the following rules have been adopted relative to the subject of furnishing statements of extracts from the records of the personnel of the volunteer armies and other similar records on file in the Record and Pension Office of this Department, and are hereby announced for the information and guidance of all concerned.

1. All requests, made by persons other than officials of the United States, for information from the official records must, to receive favorable consideration, set forth the specific purpose for which they are made, and must be sufficiently in detail to enable this Department to determine for itself how much, if any, of the information asked for is necessary for the purpose indicated and can properly be furnished.

2. Any such request that may be made with a view to determining the merits of an application for State or other aid or relief must be made, over his own signature, by the State or other official who may be authorized by law to decide whether such aid or relief shall be furnished; or, in case the decision rests with a board, commission or association, the request must be made, over his or her own signature, by the chief officer of the board or other organization which is empowered to decide the case. All such requests must, to receive favorable consideration, meet the following requirements:

(a) The character of the relief or aid for which application has been made must be fully and specifically set forth.

(b) If the application is to be decided under a law of any State, that law must be definitely cited.

(c) If the application is pending before any board or association, not created by or acting under any law, the source from which such board or association derives its authority to act must be stated.

(d) If the pending application is that of some person other than the one whose record is desired, the relationship of the applicant to the person whose record is desired must be set forth.

(e) The full name of the person whose record is requested, the rank held by him, and the designation of the organization in which it is claimed that he served, must invariably be stated.

3. Any request that may be made for the purpose of enabling a society or association to decide as to the eligibility or non-eligibility of an applicant for admission thereto must be made by the chief officer, over his or her own signature, or that branch of the society or association in which the application is to be voted upon or otherwise decided, and must meet the following requirements:

(a) The title or designation, and the location, of the branch to which the application for membership has been made, must be given.

(b) The full name and residence of the applicant, and the date on which the application was made, must be stated.

(c) The relationship of the applicant to the person whose record is desired, if the application for membership was not made by such person himself, must be set forth.

(d) If the record of any other person has been requested of, or furnished by, the War Department, in connection with the pending application, a statement to that effect, including the name of the person whose record has been requested or furnished, must be made.

(e) The full name and rank of the person whose record is desired, and the designation of the company and regiment, if any, in which he served, must be invariably stated in all cases in which service during the War of the Rebellion is claimed.

(f) The full name of the person whose record is desired, and the State from which he entered service, or of which he was a resident at the time of his entry into service, must be invariably stated in all cases in which service during the Revolution or the War of 1812 is claimed. His rank and the designation of the organization in which he served if known, should also be stated.

(g) Requests for the record of a man whose surname only is known, or for information relative to all the men bearing a certain name, will not be entertained.

4. Requests emanating from a post or other subsidiary organization of the Grand Army of the Republic must be forwarded through, and must be authenticated by the signature of, the department commander. Requests emanating from the subdivisions of other associations founded on military service during the War of the Rebellion must be forwarded and authenticated as follows: Union Veterans' Union, through department commanders; Union Veteran Legion, through the national commanders; Sons of Veterans, through division commanders.

5. The information that will be furnished for use in connection with any application for membership in any society or association, or for State or other aid or relief, will be strictly limited to that which is actually necessary to enable a decision upon the pending application to be made, and will in no case comprise items that may be desired for any other purpose, such as to complete the records of a society, to make some other and different application, or to be used in the prosecution of a claim against the United States.

6. Concise statements of the military histories, so far as shown by the records on file, of men who served in the Revolution or in the War of 1812, will be furnished upon the application of descendants of those men, under the following conditions:—

(a) The relationship of the applicant to each person whose record is desired must be stated.

(b) The full Christian name as well as the surname of such person must invariably be given, and the rank which he held and the designation of the organization in which he served, if those are known, must be stated.

(c) The place, or at least the State, from which he entered service, or of which he was a resident at the time of his entry into service, must be designated.

(d) If the name of the person whose record is desired is a common one, the designation of the organization in which he served, or the names of some of the regimental officers under whom he served, must be stated.

(e) Requests for information relative to all the men bearing a certain name will not be entertained, nor will any other request involving an unreasonable expenditure of time and labor be considered.

(f) There will not be furnished to or for any one descendant the record of service of more than two ancestors in the Revolution, or of more than two in the War of 1812.

7. Each request for the record of an officer or enlisted man of any war should be made on a separate sheet of paper, should be complete in itself, and should fully meet all the requirements of this order. In no case should requests for the records of two or more men be combined in one communication.

8. Compilations or statements relative to individual officers, enlisted men or organizations, will not be furnished, from the records on file in the Record and Pension Office, for historical, memorial, or statistical purposes, or for publication, or to complete the records of States societies, or associations.

9. Because of the great danger of the destruction, loss or misfiling, through handling by inexperienced persons or those not under the control of this department, of the muster rolls and other regimental or company records, index record cards, and all other similar records, which are on file in the Record and Pension Office, and which pertain wholly or chiefly to the personnel of the armies of the various wars, the handling of those records will be restricted exclusively to the specially trained employees of that office, and no information will be furnished from them except as hereinbefore provided, or as may be otherwise required by law.

NORWAY, ME., Nov. 20, 1903.

The oldest living member of the Grand Army now in Maine is Capt. Amos A. F. Noyes of this town, who, at the advanced age of 91, retains his faculties and health to a wonderful degree.

His military degree began in 1836, when he was chosen captain of the Norway militia. In 1839 he was appointed by the governor of Maine as a captain, and served in the Aroostook war of that year. When the Civil war broke out he entered the service, Dec. 16, 1862, as first lieutenant of Co. G, 14th regiment, serving six months and two days, when he was discharged for disabilities caused by wounds.

As soon as he recovered from these wounds he was commissioned by the governor of Maine a captain of Company H, 23d regiment, serving in this capacity nine months, receiving a discharge for expiration of time. He was then appointed captain of Company B, 32d regiment, on March 10, 1864, being discharged Dec. 12 of the same year by consolidation.

During his term of service he was in the battles of the Wilderness, Spottsylvania, Cold Harbor, North Anna River, and in front of Petersburg. Near the court house at Spottsylvania he received a severe wound in his shoulder from a shell, and was left on the field for dead. He has always suffered from the effects of this wound. He at one time received a fracture of three ribs, through falling down a hatchway on board a vessel at Ship Island.

While in the 32d regiment, by reason of the sickness of the colonel and the major, he was for some time in charge of the regiment. This regiment saw some of the hardest service of the war, and Capt. Noyes was in the thickest of it.

Since the war closed Capt. Noyes has retained his interest in the welfare of the country and of the soldiers who served under him, and has kept in touch with them. He has served as commander of Harry Rust Post, G. A. R., in Norway, and has always attended the reunions of the regiments to which he belonged. At the reunion of the old 32d this summer he was the oldest person in the assembly.

Capt. Noyes was the son of Ward Noyes, born in Andover, Mass., in the year 1772, and married Clarissa Wood. Ward Noyes early moved to Norway, where his son, the subject of this sketch, was born, Dec. 14, 1812. When only eight years old, by the death of his father, Amos was left to the care of his widowed mother. He attended the district schools of the town, and, with what privileges were at his disposal, gathered considerable knowledge.

Early in manhood he learned the carpenter's trade, which, with his farming, he carried on until the outbreak of the Civil war. Three years prior to that time he served as chairman of the selectmen of the town, and after his return from the war served in a similar capacity three years more.

Soon after his return to Norway he sold his farm and removed to the village, where he has since resided, following his trade for many years, and finally retiring from active work. He lives in his own home, quietly and comfortably.

Now, at the age of 91, he still is active and interested in all about him.

CHAPTER XI.

MISCELLANEOUS.

HEREDITY.

Out from a tomb crept Vice, with hideous leer;
"I am Heredity," he said, "whom all men fear;
I sleep, but die not: when fate calls I come,
And generations at my touch succumb."

A lofty shape rose sudden in his path,
It cried, "You lie," and struck at him in wrath;
Heredity, the braggart, stark and still,
Fell prostrate at the feet of mighty WILL.

THE ETERNAL WILL.

There is no thing we cannot overcome;
Say not thy evil instinct is inherited,
Or that some trait in-born makes thy whole life forlorn,
And calls down punishment that is not merited.

Back of thy parents and grandparents lies
The great Eternal Will. That, too, is thine
Inheritance—strong, beautiful, divine,
Sure lever of success for one who tries.

Pry up thy fault with this great lever—Will.
However deeply bedded in propensity,
However firmly set, I tell you, firmer yet
Is that vast power that comes from truth's immensity.

Thou art a part of that strange world, I say;
Its forces lie within thee, stronger far
Than all thy mortal sins and frailties are;
Believe thyself divine, and watch and pray.

There is no noble height thou canst not climb;
All triumphs may be thine in Time's futurity;
If whatsoe'er thy fault, thou dost not faint nor halt,
But lean upon the staff of God's security.

Earth has no claim the soul cannot contest.
Know thyself part of the Supernal Source,
And naught can stand before thy spirit's force;
The soul's divine inheritance is best.

THE OLD HOME.

The very frequent appearance in the poetry of the day of references to the "old homestead," the brindle cow, and the old oaken bucket, show how strongly rooted is the popular love for the farm and all its associations. Notwithstanding this, the object of all this sentiment and solicitude has become more and more pitiable, as the moss and mold of neglect and decay have slowly crept over its roof. To so many who now live in the centre of our busy hives the recollections of the hay-mow or the duck-pond of the parental farm mean the only home they have ever had. The ruthless tread of affairs has carried them from the orchards and lanes where they spent their earlier days into the narrow streets where nothing grows but money, and where there is never a relaxation from work and care. By degrees the old farms of New England have gone to pieces, the young people have migrated to the towns and cities, and often nature has claimed again for her own the land which once was tilled. Where the cattle grazed a growth of forest has come; where the old barn stood a heap of crumbling stones marks the spot, while the house, battered by storms, merely emphasizes the destruction which time has wrought. By degrees it has become tenantless. Upon the death of the old people who owned it the holder of the mortgage has stepped in. Unable to occupy it himself, he has found tenant after tenant for it. It has become unsalable, the few repairs put upon it are only added expenses. Tenantless, and avoided even by the money-lender, dilapidation and weeds take possession. But while it seems as if the desolate old spot had no friends, you may be certain that somewhere there is cherished a love for every foot of its soil, for every tree in its forests, every pebble in its brooks. Somewhere there is a person who could tell you of the undiscovered beauties of the place; somewhere there is an imagination that will always see it peopled as of old; somewhere there is a worker who dreams that in his old age he will go back to it again and possess it as an abiding place when health fails him. This is the meaning of the occasional rejuvenation which we see throughout the east. Prosperity has not overtaken the farm again, but the occupant has achieved fortune enough to rescue some fast-sinking spot from decay. This is the meaning of the growing fondness for and indulgence in amateur farming. It means that the love of a life in the open air smoulders in the breast of every one who has ever known its peaceful tranquillities, and that the excitements of the city and the cares of business cannot wholly eradicate it. One who has been nurtured among the trees and fields can never think of the four walls of a city or suburban dwelling as a "home." To him it is merely a residence—a transient stopping place, to which he can attach no sentiment, and which he is ready to abandon at a moment's notice, without regret or sorrow. Much as has been written of the Anglo-Saxon fondness for home, the trend toward cities has obtused the sharpness of the feeling to such an extent that we can hardly be considered to-day as home-loving a people as we were a hundred years ago. Perhaps as the country grows richer we shall return to it again. Meanwhile, the reverence for the emblems of the old order is still keen, and with the first breath of spring the odors of the opening buds and leaves steal into the open windows of our crowded offices to remind every occupant of an abandoned farm somewhere.

VERITABLE PATRIARCH.

KENTUCKIAN AT THE HEAD OF FAMILY NUMBERING 162.

GALLATIN, TENN., Jan. 19. To be at the head of a family of 162 persons is a record seldom falling to the lot of man. But such is the case of John Chandler, who resides in Allen county, Kentucky, just over the Sumner county line. This gentleman is the father of twenty-nine children, twenty-one of whom are living and have families. These twenty-one "children" have an average of five children to each family, thus making Mr. Chandler the grandfather of 105 persons. But this is not the full extent of his offspring, for he has thirty-five great-grandchildren. So it will be seen that, with his wife, Mr. Chandler stands pater-familias of 162—an achievement rarely equalled. It certainly is not paralleled when the fact is considered that the members of this large family are all living. Mr. Chandler is a remarkable man in several other respects. He is a man of more than ordinary intelligence, and although 75 years of age, and residing in the hills of Allen county, reads current literature and keeps himself informed on the leading topics of the day. His eyesight is perfect, and he reads the finest print without the aid of glasses. He is an expert rifle shot, and spends a great deal of time squirrel-hunting. He cast his first ballot for a presidential candidate in 1848, for Taylor, the Whig nominee, but for the past fifty years has voted the Democratic ticket. His wife, who is three years older than he, like himself, is hale and hearty, and together they enjoy themselves in their comfortable little home in the hills of Allen county, where all travellers who go that way are always cordially received.

MAY BE THE YOUNGEST GRANDMOTHER.

[From the Cincinnati Enquirer.]

VINCENNES, IND., Jan. 14. Knox county lays claim to having the youngest grandmother in the State, if not in the United States. Her name is Mrs. James Burke, and she is barely 88 years old. She lives at Deckers. Her daughter Bertha married John Midkiff two years ago, and to them a little daughter was born this week. The mother of the child is not quite 15 years old, while the father is but 19. The combined age of the father and mother is but one year older than the grandmother, and the combined ages of the grandfather, grandmother, mother, father and child, is only 100 years, yet this represents three generations.

As quite a number of our subscribers, in sending their orders for our work, have guessed at our relationship, ranging through that of several generations, we have concluded to print it, in order to save the curious the trouble of investigation. We would be pleased to know just what is our degree of cousinship.

NICHOLAS.'

Generations.

	John	2	James
	John	3	Joseph
	Simon	4	Joseph
	James	5	Edward
	James	6	Joshua F.
	Henry	7	Harriette E.
	Henry E.	8

Being of a former generation, Miss Noyes ought to be older than Henry E.; but he is a descendant of the eldest branch, his ancestor John having been the oldest son of Nicholas; while she is a descendant of James, one of the younger sons, and is the younger. We have worked together on this genealogy since 1892, each sending to the other all new data, so that the records have actually been kept in duplicate. Col. Noyes has carried his records wherever his military duties sent him, whether into the Indian country in the territories, or to Cuba. Having visited New England but once since 1879, most of the data has been collected by correspondence. Some of the records are actually worn out by frequent handling, and some have been copied at least a dozen times.

A GENEALOGICAL VICTIM.

At the golden portal yonder,
Stood our ever faithful Pete,
Waiting for some tired out wanderer
To let in on golden street.

As he gazed far in the distance
On the struggling earth below,
Saw he just about to leave it
One poor man, so full of woe.

As he neared the good old keeper
He could scarcely drag along,
Though on earth he was considered
Quite a man amongst the strong.

When the journey he had ended,
There he stood, outside the door,
All exhausted from his labors,
Summering on earth in '94.

Seems to me your life is shortened
By a score of years or more,
My dear man what brings you thither,
Why not stay on yonder shore?

Here we'd rather let in elders
Who are weak and need the rest,
All the young on earth should wander
'Till they've worked to do their best.

Done my best? the wanderer answered;
Sure I've tried to do that, most.
But your record, said St. Peter,
Is not one of which to boast.

Up to June of this last summer
You had led a fair good life,
Oh, dear man, why did you enter
In that dread genealogical strife?

'Stead of settling with your family
In the quiet country nooks,
You did leave your wife and children
To look up the dead in books.

What cared you who married Joseph
In two hundred years gone by?
Whether Mr. — what you call it
Did perform the nuptial tie?

Does it matter whether Prudence
Was of Jane or Susan Ann?
And I'm sure it makes no difference
Which she had as "her old man."

Think of all the coin you wasted
Travelling over country wide,
Seeing who had Jeremiah
Taken to him as a bride.

Then you couldn't locate Faithful,
Whether she married John of C,
Or was fool enough to squander
Her whole life with John of Lee.

Now John of Lee had nine children,
But you had it down as eight,
Then you took another journey
To explain that extra date.

Your poor wife she grew distracted
Hearing of your family bones,
E'en the living in your household
Jarred your nerves by childish tones.

The family tree you grew on paper,
And did hoist your bones on limb,
On the highest 'stead of lowest
You did hang your uncle Jim.

Ah! poor wretch, my pity for you
For until the earth doth end,
You must ever, ever wander,
On this genealogical bend.

On the other side of portal
You will find your bones way back,
And from Adam you must search for 'Till you find no one you lack.

On the fields of gold some wander,
While some do roam on fields of heat,
You must go from one to t'other,
Not on wings, but on your feet.

Enter, enter, my poor stranger,
On your genealogical search.
Not until the earth has ended
Can you sit on your high perch.

MAY MARRY THIRTEENTH WIFE.

DUBLIN, Ind., Jan. 23. Philip Veidelburg of Madison county undoubtedly holds the record in Indiana for marriages. He is 56 years of age and has been married twelve times. He is the father of thirty-two children. It is said Veidelburg hopes to live long enough to marry his thirteenth wife.

PUZZLING FAMILY RELATIONS CONSEQUENT ON TWO MICHIGAN MARRIAGES.

[New York Journal.]

In Prescott, Mich., recently, John A. Cameron, aged 89, married Miss Anna B. Van Doren, aged 26. Previous to this marriage Hugh C. Cameron, aged 58, son of John A. Cameron, married Mrs. George Van Doren, widowed mother of Miss Anna Van Doren. The resulting complications are best set forth as follows :—

Father—John A. Cameron married Anna B. Van Doren, who was his son's daughter-in-law. By this marriage John A. Cameron became his son's step-son-in-law; his wife's step-grandfather; his mother-in-law's father-in-law; his daughter-in-law's son-in-law.

Son—Hugh C. Cameron, son of John A. Cameron, married to Mrs. George Van Doren, who is his father's mother-in-law. By this marriage Hugh C. Cameron became his father's step-father-in-law; his wife's step-grandson-in-law; his step-mother's step-father.

Mother—Mrs. George Van Doren, mother of Anna Van Doren, married Hugh C. Cameron, son of John A. Cameron. By this marriage Mrs. Van Doren became her daughter's step-daughter-in-law; her son-in-law's daughter-in-law; her husband's grandmother-in-law.

Daughter—Anna Van Doren, daughter of Mrs. George Van Doren, married John A. Cameron, father of Hugh C. Cameron. By this marriage Anna Van Doren became her mother's step-mother-in-law; her husband's step-granddaughter; her step-son-in-law's step-daughter-in-law; her father-in-law's mother-in-law; her father-in-law's step-mother.

So far the complications have been confined to the first generation. What, then, are the possibilities when a second generation comes along to muddle up things still more?

Suppose a boy were to be born to Mrs. John A. Cameron and one to Mrs. Hugh C. Cameron as well; what relation would these two boys be to each other and to the original quartet of oddly connected persons?

TO WAR ON ANCESTORS.

A Brooklyn girl says that she is going to start a new society. She does not intend doing this because she thinks there is a dearth of women's societies. But she has discovered an entirely new field, quite unoccupied by women's societies or any other kind. The name of the new organization is to be the Parvenu Society, and the badge a mushroom; the motto, "She cometh up as a flower."

The members of this society will be allowed to mention their fathers and mothers, and may speak occasionally of a grandfather or a grandmother, but a mention of a great-grandfather or a great-grandmother will be punished by fines. No ancestors of any degree of nearness may be described to other members unless said ancestors have been engaged in manual labor or have been the objects of public charity or public punishment. Family records, relics, genealogical trees and other indications of family antiquity will be burned at the monthly meetings. People who have proof of the antiquity of their stock will not be really acceptable as members, but they will be received on condition that they use every effort to obliterate the knowledge that they have had ancestors.

The Brooklyn girl is not animated by a spirit of envy. No sour grapes have set her teeth on edge. She is eligible to the Daughters of the Revolution, the Daughters of the American Revolution, the New England Women, even to the Colonial Dames! The members of these various societies cannot imagine, so they say, "why she talks as she does." And then, again, there are other women who say they can.—New York Sun.

MARRIES HIS TWELFTH WIFE AT EIGHTY-NINE.

CONNECTICUT MAN SELECTS A TWENTY-TWO-YEAR-OLD GIRL TO ROUND OUT THE DOZEN.

MERIDEN, CONN., Sept. 28. Zerad Pomeroy of Middlefield has taken another wife. He is 89 and she is 22, and this is Pomeroy's twelfth matrimonial venture. The new Mrs. Pomeroy is a granddaughter of her husband's first wife's sister.

Pomeroy in 1838, when twenty years old, married Nellie White of Hartford. A year later she died, and Pomeroy wedded a Kensington young woman named Platt. When the gold fever of 1849 sent many men to California, Pomeroy and his wife were among twenty Meriden people who chartered a boat out of New Haven and sailed around the Horn to the Pacific coast. During the voyage Mrs. Pomeroy died and was buried at sea. A young woman aboard the vessel attracted Pomeroy's attention, and another marriage soon followed. From California Pomeroy went to Japan, and there his third wife died.

Returning to this country he again married and came east. He settled in New York city, where six wives fell to his lot. Four died, one disappeared, and one he divorced. Returning to this State he married again, and that wife died last spring.

A CASE OF PROSTRATION.

BY FRANK SAMUEL CHILD.

"He's a very sick man," said Mr. White, who lived next door to the minister. "Their having a council of doctors now."

"What's the matter with him?" inquired Mr. Black.

"Can't find out," was the reply.

"Some new disease, I suppose," observed Mr. Blue. "Its a great day for new diseases."

"We'll know when the doctors come out." Mr. Green, the fourth speaker, looked wise. His family physician had finally been called, and he knew everything.

There were many anxious people in the parish, for the minister had been taken with strange symptoms. The first thing which aroused their special attention was the fact that he preached repeatedly upon heredity. The theme seemed to have a fascination for him, and he had evidently read all the late literature on the subject. It was also observed that in his pastoral visits he talked more and more about people's ancestors. This was taken as one result of his reading so much on heredity. After a few months he became deeply interested in family records and borrowed everything in that line which proved available. There was a stack of books and a pile of manuscripts bearing various family names that almost filled one side of his study.

The postmaster noted the fact that the minister corresponded with several learned societies, both in England and America, heraldry and genealogy being the subjects suggested by the names of these organizations. Another curious thing was remarked at this stage of the minister's disease. He developed a passion for attending family reunions. Whenever the newspapers announced that the Stones or the Joneses, the Brights or the Dwights were to meet and form an association or celebrate an anniversary, young Mr. Gray (that was the minister's name) was certain to be away. It became obvious that his mind was running on family connections. He also haunted the Town House. He would mouse among the old papers in the vaults and pore over the fine chirography of former town clerks and will-writers with a concentration that was positively distracting. The odds and ends of time were picked up in this way.

These symptoms were followed by more serious and distressing ones. The minister's clothes became dusty. Not that Mrs. Purple, with whom he boarded, did not take good care of them (he was an unmarried man), but rather that dust seemed naturally to gravitate in his direction and settle perversely upon his garments. Some people explained it by saying that he lived in an atmosphere of dust created by familiarity with the dust of ages. It was frequently remarked that "dust thou art and unto dust thou shalt return" found in him a living illustration.

A wrinkled forehead and a proneness to lean forward and bend down next appeared to indicate the progress of his disease. It was at this period that his parish became alarmed and discussed measures of relief. There followed a loss of appetite, especially noted whenever he was invited out to tea—perhaps three or four times a week. Do what they might, prepare his favorite dishes, insist upon his eating, still it amounted to the same thing—there was simply the ghost of an appetite.

Mrs. Purple soon reported that he spent many sleepless nights. She heard him walking his study floor, and on several occasions he had been known to knock down heavy books at two o'clock in the morning, doubtless stumbling over them in his mental anguish.

Everybody saw that he was absent-minded, for when Mrs. White met him one day and said "Good afternoon, Mr. Gray," he replied: "Yes, her great-grandmother was a Flint, and married John Skinn. All the Skinn-Flints of Boston are descended from them." Mrs. White burst into tears and hurried home to tell her husband.

Mr. Gray had lovely blue eyes when he was settled, but they now turned red, and on several occasions he had been known to put on green goggles, apparently thinking that green harmonized with blue and red. That might be termed the straw which broke the camel's back. "A man with such taste must be off his base," said one of the young ladies who attended all the baseball games. Poor Mr. Gray! Mrs. Purple did all in her power for him, the Whites and the Blacks, the Blues and the Greens called upon him, drove with him and continued to ask him to tea. But the breakdown came. He had the most fantastic dreams imaginable. They were day dreams and night dreams. One could tell that he dreamed through the day, for he uttered strange names and muttered strange things, gesticulating mysteriously and appearing to associate with invisible visitors. When night came Mrs. Purple heard him converse in his solitary room with great volubility, the words maternal ancestor, paternal ancestor, collateral descent, first remove, second remove, family tree, generation, broken link and similar phrases occurring and recurring with painful iteration, until she thought that her heart would break. And now they were having a council of doctors. They called Mrs. Purple and inquired into the good man's habits.

"Well, you see," observed Mrs. Purple, "he was a most methodical person. He gave his mornings to sermon work and his afternoons to pastoral work and his nights to answering letters. Why, I've seen as many as ten letters come to that man in one day, asking something about somebody's ancestors. Folks wrote to him from Maine to California. I think every woman in the United States who wanted to join the Colonial Dames or the Daughters of the American Revolution, and every man who wanted to join the Sons of Colonial Wars, or Sons of the Revolution, or any of the dozen other patriotic societies, wrote and asked him if he would be so kind as to write out a pedigree for them.

and give names, dates, authorities and incidents. Mr. Gray, you know is such a conscientious man that he never shirks. So when those letters came he seemed to think that they must all be answered, and that took him half the night. I said, 'Mr. Gray, you'll kill yourself,' and he said, 'Why, I like it, Mrs. Purple. Its perfectly fascinating.' " (They were talking in the room adjoining his sick chamber.)

"I have it," shouted a feverish voice. "His great-grandfathers' second wife was a Herring. The Herrings are all Fishes, on the mother's side. Gules a fesse ermine, between three doves argent. Spes alit. Intermarried with the Lyons and the Hoggs. Here's the tree. Yours truly"—

"That's the way he goes on day and night," whispered Mrs. Purple. "What do you think is the matter with him?"

"Did you say that he answered all those letters?" inquired the physician, who had been summoned from the city.

"Every one of them," was the reply.

"And it took him days and days to make out the lines and the trees. Why, one woman wrote thirty queries and another seventeen, and a great many of them ten or twelve. How many children were there, how many times did they marry, where did they live, what families were they allied with, and hundreds of such questions."

"I pity these pastors of the old New England churches," said the city doctor.

"The disease is contagious, and it spreads by correspondence."

"The last time Mr. Gray sat down to the table with us," continued Mrs. Purple, pathetically, "he never asked the blessing, but put down his head and muttered, 'Williams and Hone, Solomon Stone, the Hillses, the Millses and Anthony Cone, ten men.' The children were awfully frightened. What did you say the disease was?"

"Madam," it was Dr. Brown, the eminent specialist, speaking, "Mr. Gray has an alarming attack of genealogical prostration. We must get him into the woods beyond all communication with the outside world, where he must remain one year and a day. Then by the frequent use of common sense, given in large doses, he will doubtless be able to stand up under his work in this ancient parish for at least three years."

HOW YOUR REMOTE ANCESTORS GOT THE NAME YOU BEAR.

Did you ever think that every name must originally have meant something? The letters did not join themselves together in a haphazard way, and no matter how much the name has been twisted or perverted, it originally meant something and was intended to be applicable to the person who first bore it.

In early times amid primitive conditions of civilization people had only one name, and that name was given because of some circumstance connected with the child's birth, or some physical peculiarity, or in the hope that the child would grow up to have the qualities the name denoted.

The best example of this is to be found in Bible names in the early days of Jewish history. Esau, meaning hairy, was so called because he was hairy from his birth; Moses, drawn out, because he was taken from the water; Benoni, son of my sorrow; Ruth, beauty, because it was hoped the child would be beautiful.

In the very early times, therefore, each person possessed a name that was individually significant and appropos. But when with advancing civilization it became necessary, in order to preserve family and tribal distinctions, to name children after their progenitors, names originally applicable lost their appropriateness.

For example, the first girl named Blanche, must have been a blonde; but how many Blancches we can all recall to-day who are types of the perfect brunette.

When the Roman father who first called his son Quintus gave him the name it must have been because the latter was the "fifth child" and a boy. Quintus was a very common Roman name, but later was applied indiscriminately, whether the boy was the "fifth" or not.

The first Philip was undoubtedly a "lover of horses," or was intended to be such. But how many people to-day give this name to their boys without a thought as to its meaning, and, worse yet, how many men bear this name without knowing what it means and without knowing that it means anything at all.

That a man should know nothing of the meaning of his own name seems ridiculous. Yet this is true of the majority. Of course, in many cases it is impossible to get at any meaning.

This is essentially true of surnames for often this form has been altered or they have come from other languages of which their owners have no knowledge, or their origin is shrouded in the mists of obscure antiquity. But the great general truth still holds that every name was originally significant.

In the case of modern first names, or so-called Christian names, there are a very few indeed of which we do not know the meaning and the origin.

But what of the vast number of common surnames, like Smith, Jones, Johnson, Williams, Harris, Brown, the many Macs, the various O's like O'Brien, and many similar ones? These are all easy enough to explain.

The commonest of all last names is Smith. Why is this the commonest surname? The answer is simple enough. The word smith originally meant a worker in rough materials. There were many different kinds of smith—goldsmith, tinsmith, silversmith, blacksmith, etc. Later, when a more developed social condition created a demand for distinctive names, certain men of this profession took from it the surname of Smith.

Here is the principle of taking a name from an occupation, one of the commonest origin of surnames. And as there were so many different workers, or smiths, most of the different kinds of smith, goldsmith, silversmith, etc., were merged into the common class of plain smith. The result of all this is that to-day "although all smiths are not Smiths, the Smiths are even more numerous than the smiths."

Occupations, as long ago as Greek and Roman times, furnished an extra name by which to distinguish men. Most Roman gentlemen had three names, the first generally some common name, corresponding to our ordinary Christian names; then the clan name, and finally, a third name generally acquired in later life, indicating a personal peculiarity or some event in the man's life.

One of the earliest Roman historians was named Quintus Tabinus Pictor. The last name he acquired from his occupation of writer or word-painter. He is, in fact, the first Mr. Painter.

Thousands of our names have this origin. It would be easy to make a long list, but a few occupation names naturally suggest themselves—Butcher, Carpenter, Driver, Potter, Sailor, Tailor or Taylor, Weaver, and like names from other languages, such as Zimmerman.

Americans are not as curious about the origin of their names as people in olden times. The Romans, when they could not get at the etymology of a proper name, generally tried to account for it by making up a story about the man who first bore it. A good example of this is the name Scaevola, which means "left-handed." "This was the name of an aristocratic family in Rome, and to account for its origin somebody, probably to flatter the family, made up the following story familiar to all who have ever read Roman history. When Porsenna, King of the Etruscans, was besieging Rome, a noble youth named C. Mucius, entered the Etruscan camp in disguise in order to kill Porsenna. He was captured, and when led before the king, to show his contempt of pain and death, he held his right hand in the fire until it was burned away. In this way he got the name of Scaevola, or the Left-handed.

One of the commonest, as well as one of the oldest kinds of name used to-day as a surname is the patronymic—that is a new name made up of the father's first name with prefix or suffix meaning "son." As early as Bible times there is this addition for the sake of greater definiteness in the case of "Joshua, the son of Nun."

The Greeks of the earliest literary period used the same system. Homer speaks of Achilles Pelides. The last name is the patronymic, meaning "son of Peleus," but the part meaning "son of" is put at the end, just like the name Johnson, John's son. The English patronymics of this kind are innumerable and form one of the largest classes of surnames to-day.

Their name is legion—Johnson, Robinson, Jackson, Williamson, Robertson, Thompson, for Tom's son, Peterson and many others. These names are very plain and simple. But there are other patronymic which are not quite so obvious, some of which are shortened forms, some of which come from other languages. To the first class belong those names in which the word son is omitted altogether. When the ancient Greeks spoke of "Xenophon the son of Gryllos," the word son was naturally thought of and supplied after the article the; just as once Jack William's naturally meant Jack, William's son; but the word son being so obvious was often dropped.

This gave rise to a new surname alongside of the older and fuller one. So there are Roberts and Robertson, Williams and Williamson, Johnson, and Johns. This last name does not look familiar. But change it to the oft heard Jones and it becomes plain at once why there are so many people of that name. John being the commonest Christian name makes the commonest patronymic, Jones. So Willis and Harris are for Willie's (son) and Harrie's son, the latter coexisting with Harrison.

There is an enormous number of patronymics that few would suspect of being such—names like Fitzgerald, McBride, O'Brien and Price. This list includes practically all the Fitzs, all the Mcs and Macs, all the O's and many common names beginning with P. Fitz is a Norman word, a corruption of fils, son, and is used as a prefix. Roger, fils de Guillaume, became Roger Fitzwilliam; Robert, fils de Simon, is doubtless the old fighting Norman ancestor of Bob Fitzsimmons.

Mac and O are prefixes from the Celtic, meaning respectively "son of" and "descendant of." McGregor means the son of Gregor; McDowell, the son of Dowell. So with O'Brien, O'Rourke, O'Toole, and all the other O's.

In names like Price, the etymology is somewhat obscured, but the real origin is very evident to the student. Ap was a Welsh prefix, meaning "son of"; but the A was lost and the P joined on to the following name. Thus David Ap-Rhys became David Price, that is David the son of Rhys; Owen ap-Howell became Owen Powell; Evan ap-Richard became Evan Pritchard, and so on.

Another large class of surnames comes from personal peculiarities, chiefly the complexion.

It is amusing how many colors are often mustered together in a list of names, and the practice was very common in ancient times. Niger, meaning black, was a common surname among the Romans; William Rufus, the Red King in English history, is well known. How often in modern society Mr. Brown is presented to Mrs. White, or Green grasps the hand of Black, or the English Gray meets his German descended friends, Schwarz and Roth. All these names, with the probable exception of Green, came originally from the complexion or color of the hair.

The name Green, however, is typical of another large class of names arising from locality, denoting either the man's native country, or city, or the special kind of place in which he lived. Green is probably like Hill, Field, Lea or Lee, Wood or Woods, Forest, Tree, Lake, and Rivers. John Green was doubtless originally John o' the green; and this was shortened to plain John Green. The first James Hill no doubt lived on or near a hill, and was so called to distinguish him from another James who lived in a field and was called James of the field, or Jim Field.

Common surnames indicating a man's nationality are English, Irish, Welsh, French, and many others.

All surnames were originally nicknames of a certain kind, but the typical nickname as we think of it arose from a sobriquet representing some personal peculiarity or defect. The ancient Romans, in spite of their stern dignity, had their jokes and their nicknames, and the oft-heard school nicknames of "Reddy," "Skinny," "Fatty," "Baldy," and the like, find their Roman parallels in Rufus, Macer, Crassus, and Calvus, respectively, which latter came to be common family names.

This same tendency is seen in the middle ages in the nicknames added to certain well-known kings, such as Pepin le Bref, Charles the Bald, and Louis the Child. To-day there are many names like these which were once applicable, but are no longer so. Among a few that may be mentioned are Short, Long, Large, Little, Gross, Rich, Poor, Swift, Lightfoot, and many similar ones.

Finally, a very large number of names come from natural objects of every-day life, such as animals, birds, fishes, flowers, fruits, etc.

There are four chief sources for these. In the case of animals the name of the animal was supposed to represent the qualities of the animal; or the name of the natural object was given in allusion to some episode in the bearer's history, or it was borrowed from the device on the man's shield, or, last, and this principle is responsible for a vast number of surnames, it was taken from the sign of the tavern or inn that its bearer kept. One might start a zoo with the names of animals taken from any city directory. There could be found the "Lyon" lying down with the "Lamb," and the "Wolf" consorting with the "Fox." Martin, Beaver, Seal, Bear, Kid, Hare, and many others roam at large through the pages of the directory.

Many names from natural objects might be cited; unnecessarily, however, for one such would represent the class. In fact, it may be said that there is no surname, representing some ordinary natural object, that may not once have been used as an inn sign.—Philadelphia Press.

COTTON MATHER'S LETTER.

Mr. Samuel Orcutt received from his daughter in Chicago, Mrs. G. S. Abbott, the following very curious and interesting old letter, written in 1682 by Rev. Cotton Mather, famous in Puritan times :—

Sept. 16, 1682.

To Ye Aged and Beloved, Mr. John Higginson :

There be now, at sea, a ship, called the Welcome, which has on board an hundred or more of the heretics and malignants called Quakers, with W. Penn, who is the chief scamp, at the head of them.

The general court has accordingly given secret orders to Master Malachi Huscott, of the brig Propasse, to waylay the said Welcome slyly as near the Cape of Cod as may be, and make captive the said Penn and his ungodly crew, so that the Lord may be glorified and not mocked on the soil of this new country with the heathen worship of these people.

Much spoil can be made by selling the whole lot to Barbadoes, where slaves fetch good prices in rum and sugar, and shall not only do the Lord great service by punishing the wicked, but we shall make great good for his ministers and people.

Master Huscott feels hopeful, and I will set down the news when the ship comes back.

Yours in ye bowels of Christ,

COTTON MATHER.

That the foregoing letter is authentic is apparent from the following act of the General Court in 1656: "Whereas there is a cursed sect of heretics lately risen up in the world, which are commonly called Quakers, who take upon them to be immediately sent of God, and infallibly assisted by the spirit to speak and write blasphemous opinions, despising government and the order of God in church and commonwealth, speaking evil of dignities, reproaching and reviling magistrates and ministers, seeking to turn the people from the faith, and gain proselytes to their pernicious ways, * * * the master of any vessel bringing any known Quakers or other blasphemous heretics into any town or harbor within the limits of the Colony shall pay a fine of 100£ for each offence, and the Quakers themselves shall be severely whipped and sentenced to hard labor in the house of correction." The next year the laws were amended and made more rigorous. Quakers banished from the Colony who returned without the consent of the General Court were liable to be severely whipped, to have their ears cut off, or their tongues bored with hot irons. In 1661 the law was again made more stringent, one form of punishment being to strip them naked above the waist, tie them to the tail of a cart, and whip them from town to town. It was forbidden to entertain them or assist them in any way.

MARRIAGEABLE AGES.

In Germany the man must be at least 18 years of age.

In Greece the man must have seen at least 14 summers and the woman 12.

In Portugal a boy of 14 is considered marriageable, and a woman of 12.

In France the man must be 18 and the woman 14; in Belgium, the same ages.

In Spain the intended husband must have passed his 14th year and the woman her 12th.

In Austria a "man" and a "woman" are supposed to be capable of conducting a home of their own from the ages of 14.

In Hungary, for Roman Catholics, the man must be 14 years old and the woman 12; for Protestants, the man must be 18 and the woman 15.

In Russia and Saxony they are a little more sensible, and a youth must refrain from entering into matrimony till he can count 18 years, and the woman till she can count 16.

In Turkey any youth and maiden who can walk properly and can understand the necessary religious service are allowed to be united for life.

YOUR AGE.

A German statistician has calculated that of every 1000 people 100 reach the age of 75, thirty-eight the age of 85, and only two reached 95. In the seventeenth century the average duration of life was only 18 years; in the eighteenth, 20; of this century it is 36.

FIVE GENERATIONS.

[From the Boston Globe.]

Five generations were represented at the observance of the eighty-fourth birthday of Mrs. Mary E. Brown of Lynn, Mass., and this was the third time she represented one of five living generations in her family. When her grandmother and mother were alive Mrs. Brown's daughter and the latter's child were present on one occasion. Another time, when the family was celebrating the birthday of Mrs. Brown's mother, her daughter had become a grandmother, and five generations were again represented.

CONGRATULATIONS.

LIFE.

[From the Housekeeper.]

Two things there are we have no voice in choosing—
 Our ancestors nor our existence here.
 Fate's mandates here admit of no refusing
 From prince or beggar, sinner, saint, or seer!

Time leads us onward through the world's deep mazes;
 No horoscope forecasts our end or way;
 The keenest thought within the world that blazes
 Cannot elucidate beyond to-day!

We see the footprints of those gone before us;
 The heights attained; the ledge where some fell;
 Anon we catch heaven's chimes, sweetly sonorous,
 Or hear a plaint from sin's own citadel.

Our work goes on. We fancy we can fashion
 A structure fair, and beautiful, and grand!
 We often fail! God can but have compassion
 Upon the heart that owns a feeble hand.

I can but think the rudest life-work given
 Has hidden in it one fair, polished stone;
 Smooth, perfect, beautiful—as seen from heaven—
 Though sunk in chaos, with rank weeds o'ergrown.

Enough 'twould seem, if, with each gift extended,
 We add our fraction to earth's highest good;
 That we may whisper, when our life's expended,
 Though poor my work, I did the best I could!

 AN INJUSTICE.

We speak of Time gone past : we do him wrong.
 No weary traveller he, with scythe and glass,
 And deeply furrowed cheeks and hair grown long—
 'Tis we who pass.

Our eyes, not his, are dimmed with many tears,
 Our feeble hands grasp joys we cannot hold.
 It is not Time, but we, who count the years—
 'Tis we grow old.

SIX GENERATIONS PRESENT.

MISS LYDIA FAEBER'S GREAT-GREAT-GRANDMOTHER ATTENDED HER WEDDING.

A wedding, unique because it was witnessed by the great-great-grandmother of the bride, took place on Thursday night, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Faerber, 2716 A street, Kensington, when their daughter, Miss Lydia Faerber, was married to Mr. John Patterson of this city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. F. C. Fluck, of the Lutheran Church, at Fifth and Cumberland streets, and was witnessed by a large gathering of relatives, including six generations on the bride's side. Miss Bertha Faerber, a sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and Mr. Walter Frost was best man,

The great-great-grandmother, Mrs. Mary E. Faerber, is over 95 years old, and is in good health and the best of spirits.

PROLIFIC FAMILY THIS.

There has just died in Cumberland county, Ky., the oldest son of a family that, so far as any known records are concerned, bears the palm for fecundity. He was Jason Webb, third child of Miles Webb, the first settler in the Cumberland district, which is now almost entirely populated by his offspring.

Old Miles Webb did not do so much toward increasing the population, having added but six to its number, three boys and three girls.

Jason, who was eighty-one years old when he died, saw no fewer than four hundred and forty-four direct descendants. He began with nineteen children. From these sprang one hundred and seventy-five grandchildren, one hundred and fifty great-grandchildren, and an even hundred great-great-grandchildren, all living.

Next in the order of number of descendants comes Jason's younger brother, Miles, who is still living at the age of seventy-eight. Miles is still as full of vitality, apparently, as any of his descendants, who number more than four hundred. He was father to twenty children, two of whom died in early life. There are one hundred and sixty-five grandchildren, one hundred and fifty great-grandchildren, and ninety of the fourth generation, a total of 423 descendants.

"Aunt Polly," the second child of the original patriarch, ranks third in this remarkable family. From her ten children sprang 110 grandchildren, who made Aunt Polly great-grandmother to seventy and great-great-grandmother to forty—a total of 230 descendants.

These three alone are, therefore, responsible for more than a thousand inhabitants of Cumberland county.

Another daughter of old Miles, Aunt Sally, has 208 descendants. There are thirteen of the first generation, eighty of the second, sixty-five of the third, and fifty of the fourth. Aunt Sally is an active old lady of seventy-five years.

Aunt Letty, the oldest of the children, who is now hale and hearty at the ripe age of ninety years, scores the modest total of only 201 descendants. She began with eleven children, and there are ninety, sixty and forty of the succeeding generations respectively.

The least prolific of all is the youngest child, William, but even at that he can boast of 166 Kentuckians who owe their existence to him. He has eleven children, seventy-five grandchildren, fifty great-grandchildren, and thirty great-great-grandchildren.

By blood and affinity there are in the county of Cumberland and the country adjacent thereto no fewer than twelve thousand persons included in this family fold. If this is not a record, there is some other remarkable family to be heard from.

READY TO MARRY FOR THE FOURTEENTH TIME.

DR. JAMES NICHOLAS VANN, AGED 94 YEARS, PREPARED TO RESIST THE INVASION OF AGED SPINSTERS WHO SEEK TO BECOME THE FOURTEENTH MRS. VANN.

Dr. James Nicholas Vann of Goshen, N. Y., who is looking for his fourteenth wife, is so bothered by lonely women who want to marry him on the spot that he is becoming alarmed. He has issued a warning that undesirable women must keep away.

Any young, nice looking, plump blonde of sunny disposition may apply, but all old and wrinkled come at their peril.

"A young and lovely woman," says Dr. Vann, who is 94 years of age, "is the human heart's delight, but the old, designing woman, who insists on marrying you whether you are willing or not, is a jackal and a beast of prey. I shall greet them as such."

Dr. Vann was a famous hunter at one time, and devoted years to the capture of wild animals for Dan Rice, the circus man. The doctor thinks his determined attitude will scare away all the old girls.

"My first twelve wives were fair and lovely women, and are undoubtedly now with the angels," said Dr. Vann. "My thirteenth wife was not, and her name I will not mention. She is living to-day. The names of the first twelve were Susan Westbrook, her sister, Nancy, and their aunt, Mrs. Kate Westbrook, all of Milford, Pa.; Miss Mary E. Petton of Dingmans; Addie Graham of Williamsburg, Va.; Sarah E. Deepomp of Philadelphia; Mary Jane Conkling of Philadelphia; Miss Susie Corwin of Milford, Pa.; Miss Annie Harding of Philadelphia; Margaret J. Case of Denver; Miss Ada Minehaldt of Denver; Miss Julia De Wet of Indianapolis; Miss Gertrude Lamont of Indianapolis, and the 'Belle of Orange County,' the thirteenth."

"Dr. Vann," he was asked, "have you thought of the reunion which will take place in the joyous hereafter?"

"Yes, indeed," replied the old man; "if I were to meet all my deceased wives in any other place I fear the green-eyed monster would enter their hearts, but as all is happiness over there, I shall depart this life when the final summons come without trepidation. I know that each of my deceased wives would rather have me be happy than plodding around the world alone. Therefore I intend to marry again, and I trust my fourteenth wife may be in form and feature a composite picture of all the rest and the embodiment of their many virtues."

FAMILY NAMES LIKE THINGS.

NAMES IDENTICAL WITH AND SUBSTANTIALLY LIKE THOSE OF FAMILIAR ELEMENTS.

NEW YORK, Feb. 2. It is curious how many family names are substantially like those of familiar things. Take, for instance, the seasons: There is Spring, also Winter, and if there is no Summer there is a Summers, and though there be no Fall there is a Falls. Those that follow the months are January, March and May. As to names like those of the smaller sub-divisions of calendar time, Day is well known, also Weeks, while, though there may be no such name as To-morrow, there is a family named Morrow. As for familiar things in nature, take, for instance, Dew, Frost, Snow, Cloud, Storm and Gales. Raines and Hale. To family names like those of minerals it is easy to think of Flint, Cole, Rock, Stone, Garnett, Diamond, and Jewell; and of metals, Gold, and Silver and Steele. Ayer and Waters suggest the element, and Mould and Clay are not unlike earth. As to things in the heavens, there is Moon and Starr, and of the compass, West, as well as North.

There is a considerable number of family names like those of colors, as White, Black, Green, Blue, Purple, Violet, Scarlett, Brown and Gray. Like names of various members or features of the body are Hand, Armes, Legg, Foote, Bone, Chinn, Haire, Beard, and there is also a family name, Mann. Like those of names borne by animals are: Bull, Bullock, Lamb, Kidd, Colt, Badger, Hogg, Hare, and Wolf. There are many family names that are exactly like or similar to things in plant life, or their productions, as, for example, the name Plant, Rose, and Flower, Budd, Rice, Wheat, Oates, Cotton, Berry, Bean, Plum, and Cherry; and Oakes, Ashe, Pine, and Maple. A familiar family name is that of Root, and others are Branch, Stem, and Twigg.

Bird, Wing, Herron and Wrenn suggest themselves, also Crane, Crow, and Larke. Fish is a family name, and others that might be mentioned here are Haddock, Pike, Roach, Bass and Crabb. Family names suggestive of titles of rank are King, Queen, Prince, Duke, Marquis, Lord, Baron, and Knight, besides Pope and Deacon. Next take military titles, Marshall, Major and Sergeant; and peoples, English, French, Welsh, Norman, and Dutch; while among family names, like those of countries, there are England, Ireland, France, and Wales. The ones that resemble buildings are: Church, Temple, Abbey, and Tower. Another family name is House; another is Mills; and the name of Barnes is familiar. There is a family named Shedd; and others are Post, Wall, Roome, Roof, Rafter, Frame, Sills and Hall, with Locke, Boldt, if not Bolt; and Key; also Yard is familiar, and so is Garden, Gates, and Pickett. Names like those of traveled ways are Street, Lane, Alley, Way, Rhodes.

Young is a family name, and so also is Olds, Long, Short, Sharp, Blunt, Dull, Strong, Straight, Small, Stout, Little, Rich, and Poor; Bliss and Paine, and Hurry and Waite.

There are many family names like implements or of household or other articles of use, as Sickles, Mallet, Scales, and Lampe, Wickes, Couch, Broome, Needles and Shears, and Bell, Button, and Buckle. Of names like those of articles of apparel there are Coates, Vest, Cuff; and like distances are Furlong and Miles.

Pertaining to military things are names many, as Camp, French, Drum, Fife, Horn, Swords, Spears, Cannon, Gunn, Flagg, and Banner; also like those of natural features, as Lake, Forrest, Pond, Field, Marsh, Glen, Dale, Pool, Brooks, Rivers, Banks, Meadows, Cliff, Ridge.

Many of the names here enumerated are those of men famous in history; many of them are borne by men contemporaneously widely known. They were not hunted up, but set down as they occurred to me. I don't doubt that many more could easily be recalled by anybody who should give his mind to it.—Richard Timpler.

THE PURITANS COULD DRINK.

Our Puritan ancestors hardly imagined that water was either a healthful or a sufficient beverage, if we may judge from some paragraphs in their letters and diaries. Governor Bradford bitterly complains of the hardship of having to drink water, as no beer or wine was to be had. In 1629 an appeal was sent to the home company for "ministers," a "patent under seale" that their legal status as colonists might be clear and stable, and also they want "vyne planters, wheat, rye, barley, and also hop rootes." When the answer to this appeal was sent by a ship that was provisioned for three months, it carried "forty-five tuns of beere," "two casks of Malega and Canarie," "twenty gallons of aqua vitæ (brandy), and for cooking, drinking and all only six tuns of water." The Rev. Mr. Higginson, the first minister, in writing back a glowing account of the attractions of the country, said his health had been benefited by the fine air, and he added:

"Whereas my stomach could only digest and did require such drinks as were both strong and stale, now I can and doe oftentimes drinke New England water verie well."

One, Wood, wrote in "The New England's Prospect" that the country was well watered, and with a water unlike that to be found in England. "Not so sharpe, of a fatty substance, and of more jetty color. It is thought that there can be no better water in the world, yet dare I not prefer it to good beere, as some have done. Those that drink it be as healthful, fresh and lustie as they that drink beere."

Those hop roots must have flourished, for as early as 1631 the people of the colony had passed a law for putting drunkards in the stocks, and brew-houses multiplied, and an "ale quart of beere" could be bought for a penny. The manufacture of other drinks developed rapidly. Fifty years after Judge Sewall names ale, beer, mead, metheglin, cider, wine, sillabub, claret, sack, canary, punch, sack-posset and black cherry brandy. Everybody drank cider, which was produced on every farm in abundance. Besides these, there was a "beveridge" and "swizzle" made from molasses and water, and many kinds of beer; but the grand and universal drink was rum. Ships took corn, pork and lumber to the West Indies, and brought back raw sugar and molasses, which once here were speedily converted into rum. There was a distillery in every inland town, while those on the coast had scores of them. The significant name "kill-divil" was universally given to it, and it was shipped to the African coast in exchange for slaves. "Flip" and "punch" were made and drunk on all imaginable occasions. Laborers would not work at the harvest, nor builders at the trades, without an allowance of rum.

Large quantities of liquor were consumed when a minister was to be ordained, as is witnessed in many of the parish records still extant. The following record is that of the town of Beverly, Mass., at the ordination in 1785:

Thirty bowles of punch before they went to meeting,	3	0	0
Eighty people eating in the morning, at 16d., . . .	6	0	0
Ten bottles of wine before they went to meeting, . . .	1	10	0
Sixty-eight dinners, at 30d.,	10	4	0
Forty-four bowles of punch while at dinner, . . .	4	8	9

Twenty-eight bottles of wine,	2	14	0
Eight bowles of brandy,	1	2	0
Cherry rum,	1	10	0
And six people drank tea,	0	0	9

Even at the raising of a meeting house large stores of intoxicants must be laid in. When the meeting house of Medfield, Mass., was raised there were provided four barrels beer, twenty-four gallons West India rum, thirty gallons New England rum, thirty-five pounds of loaf sugar, twenty-five pounds of brown sugar, and 465 lemons. When, a century ago, General Washington was engaging a gardener, it was explicitly stated in the contract that he should have $4 at Christmas, with which he may be drunk for four days and four night; $2 at Easter, for the same purpose; $2 at Whitsuntide, to be drunk for two days; a dram in the morning, and a drink of grog at dinner at noon.

Every tavern displayed many decanters of liquor to be drunk with all meals, free, and the flipiron was kept constantly heated in the tavern fire; the sideboard of every private family had a various assortment of liquors, and not to ask a caller to drink was a breach of hospitality; in short, temperance sentiment as we now know it did not exist.—New York Sun.

THE CAT FAMILY.

[From the New York Press.]

I do not know personally a man of the name of Dog or Dogg, but there are several Catt families in this country, and they are clever people. Carrie C. Catt, for example, is making it warm for the sex. Henry L. Catt of Kansas City has named his eldest boy Thomas and his daughter Pussy. A youngster but recently born in the family is called Boer in honor of the rugged fighters of the Transvaal. This suggestive naming takes after the Hoggs of Texas—Ima, Ura and Moore.

BACHELORS WILL BE SCARCE.

LACROSSE, WIS., Jan. 26, 1908. Assemblyman Saereuv of Oshkosh has introduced in the lower house two remarkable bills. Both are to encourage the development of the population by paying annual premiums to the mothers of large families as follows:

Mothers having 6 children, $10; 7 children, $12; 8, $15; 9, $20; 10, $25; 11, $30, and 12, $35.

The other bill is to encourage matrimony, and is said to have been drafted by the woman's club of Oshkosh. It provides that the assessors of towns shall take a list of the unmarried men of 30 years of age, or over and fix a special tax of $10 a year on them.

Sixty-two years ago a man named Jones moved from Kentucky to Dade county, Mo., taking with him a family of ten children. At a recent reunion of his descendants, held at Everton, nearly all of his 1019 descendants were present. Evidently, the charge of race suicide will not hold against that family.

ODD SURNAMES.

WHERE FAMILY NAMES CAME FROM WHEN CHRISTIAN NAMES WERE NOT NUMEROUS ENOUGH TO DISTINGUISH NEWCOMERS.

Did you ever consider the straits to which the world seems to have been subjected to find surnames for its millions of human being? That for centuries a single word served to distinguish one individual from another is a marvel. Apparently the first effort at a closer line of discrimination was founded on a man's being the son of his father; afterward on tribal relations. When these proved insufficient, personal peculiarities were laid under tribute, and many as undesirable cognomen was thus conferred, as history amply exemplified. In our day of double, triple, quadruple and even sextuple names of persons, it would seem that all ordinary adjectives to describe individuals have been exhausted, as also verbs and adverbs to indicate their acts, so that every conceivable object in nature, however inappropriate, has had to do duty in identifying the families of the earth.

Surnames formed from Adjectives and Verbs—Messrs. AZUBA, PERUDA AND PEREZ.

There has been sent to the writer a very funny little book. It is a genealogy grown brown with age, for the youngest child whose birth is recorded in it lived long enough ago to be a grandfather, at least, of the descendant who looks at the book to-day. The volume, long out of print, is certainly worth its weight in gold; and it is the crudest sort of family record, merely a list of names and residences, with the birth year generally given and the death year frequently. To the writer, as to the general public, its chief interest lay in the quaint old names. It has seemed to him that, even with some familiarity with genealogical records, he has not elsewhere seen such pronounced and concentrated eccentricity of nomenclature. Let us run over some of the names which were fastened to the poor little babies of long ago, selecting them here and there at random, and only premising that the record is that of a family which lived almost wholly in Vermont.

For the first four generations, there are no names of special peculiarity. Of the twenty or over, all but three or four are from the Bible, and are too familiar even today to look strange. Then appear, as Christian names Persis and Diantha. Alba and Oel shortly follow, and the plot thickens with their namesakes and an Aramenta, several Semanthas, and an Oramel. Liefe and Junio now are born, and middle names become noticeable with Rhoda Ann and Delia Artemetia. One reads with wealth of romantic suggestion, of three sisters—Almira, Amanda and Aminda; and young Socrates Hopkins fell in love with and married Emeline, who was neither stove polish, nor to his mind bitters. Persis Diantha Robinson was born as lately as the year of the second war with Britain. Ornon Tuller, who was born as the first war closed, had among his children Ornon, Jr., Billison, Perses, Melancton and Florilla. Uel and Tryphosa may have known one another, though apart in ages; and Zebina could not somehow, have been a girl, for he married Lucy. Maria Henry is another Christian name of confusing sex, and a brother Charles indicates that there was no accidental drop of a letter to form Chales.

Fays appear in number among the Vermont mountains, and then comes Sparrow as a Christian name. The Sparrows characteristically multiplied. Further on, one asks himself how a generation that had two Eldads and could love an Eester, came to name a child, frivolously, Juliett. In hasty skinning, one reads Keyes P. Cool as "Keep Cool," and wonders if the boys did not sometimes call him that. Lovisa appears, and then Phina Anna, who was a Vermont Dewey, and presumably a granddame of our admiral. Vanderspiegel and Skank, as middle names, suggest that emmigration from the continent had begun; but Orsamus and Julia Ann, together, take us back to the good old stock again. Loan, as a Christian name, raises various interesting theories in explanation. Ammi married Amy, and Ruel found a girl to marry him in spite of his name—but he was fortunate in loving before "woman's emancipation."

Of Hopher Pagael Cady no more than the name is given. That says much, but his cousins, Clarissa, Darius and Lafayette Claudius, could hardly have thrown stones. Almeron and Oella each bore their names for nineteen years, and a descendant who was named Oella had Azuba for a sister. Sereno Montague which is fine, had a brother Junius Lorenzo Montague, which is more impressive yet. Anna Cordelia, Orrin and One belonged to a single family, Almeron, Gamalliel, Apollos, Theron and Melatiah were names to revere at first hearing. Resolva Gage and Bulah Scott were married, to the credit of the former's Christian name; and Boltwood, son of Abner, married Candace, which takes us to the A B C of family history. Rudd, Submit and Paesly must have had need of patience. Ozem had a child, Anor; while Havillah and his grandson, Orvis, represent the talent of another branch for cruelty to children. Eleazer and another Azuba were fond brother and sister, and each had namesakes. Sabrina and Eleazor, Pamela, Heman and Perez and Pilo; how they must have envied plain John or Mary! Ruhama, among the northern hills, is like a breath of the Orient, and one feels strange until Susan Mariah appears again. Annesse isn't anise seed—one must take care not to read too fast; and Minerva and Vesta Anrelia show that the souls of the parents are soaring high. But we cannot go on and quote the book. Let us close with Hepzibeh, Celestia, Emeline, Peruda, Isabel, Liureudus, Arta, Seraph and the twins, Lucinda and Salinda. If there were room for another it should be Ledymira or fair Loraine.

More of these names than one would guess, have come from the Bible, more, it is clear, than the historian guessed, for the spelling is often at variance with Holy Writ. But perhaps the historian followed the spelling of the Vermonters themselves, which would have been a proper course, and if they went astray who shall blame them? It almost seems as though there might have been, in the quiet life amid the hills of Vermont a hundred years ago, a pride and joyful competition in the choice of the names of infants. To select a name which had not been used in that region before, to have it prove perplexing to pronounce and impossible to spell, and all the time to have had it come from the Bible itself, but so obscurely that the pious relatives and neighbors would have need to thumb long the pages of the Holy Book before they found it—for biblical indexes were not common then—what a triumph that must have been for happy parents; what a prestige it must have given to them, as being diligent students well versed in Bible literature. It was a wicked little victory over those to whom we all love best to give a tumble, and it was clothed in such a sanctimonious air as to remove it utterly from danger of reproof. Perhaps, as the children grew older and little by little came to understand the game, the thought of the triumph they had brought to their parents was a compensation for the names they had to bear. Let us trust that this was so, for where else should they find it? The meaning was often as pitiful as the name itself, or else possessed no pertinence that could bring with it consolation. Azurba, for instance, is "forsaken," "Peruda" is a "Persian woman" and Perez is a "breach."

PLENTY OF BACHELORS.

UNCLE SAM'S FIGURES SHOW THAT OLD MAIDS NEED NOT DESPAIR.

Heretofore bachelors have been considered choosers of their fate; old maids its victims.

But the latest statistics reveal the astonishing fact that there are 576,635 unmarried men in New York and only 456,062 unmarried women.

To be strictly accurate, there is a man and a fraction of a man for every single woman in this city, and there need not be any spinsters if, well, if these bachelors will ask them the all important question, and if they will answer yes. Leap year will do away with the first if, but leap year, owing to circumstances that won't happen again until 1904.

Cupid likes to practice on the tender hearts of the young. He shies but few arrows at well-seasoned hearts. Between the ages of seventeen and twenty-four 75 per cent of women marry.

Between the ages of twenty and twenty-five there are forty-one unmarried men to every twenty-seven unmarried women. That is the time when a woman may have her pick, but it doesn't last. Between ages of twenty-five and thirty there are only twenty-three available men for every twelve women.

Between the ages of thirty and thirty-five the list of bachelors who might sue for her hand is only thirteen to every seven women, which leaves one girl to pine alone.

Then when she gets to be between thirty-five and forty-five, her possible suitors are getting very scarce. There are only nine men to every five women.

After forty-five it is a case of nip and tuck, as things are then about equal. There may still be a poor lorn bachelor ready to lay his heart at the feet of the woman who nears her fiftieth milestone, but he is hard to find, and no statistics will vouch for his existence.

If there is not enough eligibles here to suit the New York girl's fastidious taste, and she wants more to pick from, she can go to Idaho or Wyoming. In those States there are ten bachelors to every maid, while Arizona and Washington have almost as many poor creatures of circumstance, who couldn't get married if they wanted to.

Old maids were once looked upon as a necessary evil. The fault was laid at the door of an unkind Providence that did not dispense men and women with equal liberality.

But now Uncle Sam has proved that there are men enough, and that if there are old maids in this land of the free they are old maids just because they want to be.

In these statistics divorced people, widows and widowers and all young people of both sexes under seventeen are left out. In New York, where the bachelors out-number the girls by 26 per cent., every girl should have a sweetheart.

From these tables it is plain that the prevailing impression about widows is also true. They are dangerous rivals for any girl, for one in every nine widows between the ages of twenty and thirty-five remarries, and the Government annals show that widows between twenty and twenty-four remarry much oftener than spinsters of any age.

NEWBURYPORT.

PROPOSED MONUMENT TO THE EARLY SETTLERS.

NEWBURYPORT, May 2, 1903. Old Newbury, the parent of Newburyport and West Newbury, which city and town was included in the original township until 1765 and 1819, was first settled in the early summer of 1635, 268 years ago.

The latter part of May is the exact date traditionally assigned as that on which the pioneers landed with families and household goods, having come from Ipswich, where they had wintered, by way of what is now known as Ipswich river and Plum Island sound, to the green pastures on the banks of the river Parker, or Quascacunquen, as the Indians called it.

To mark the approximate site of that landing in a fitting manner is now the task of the Newbury Historical Society, the initiative having been taken and the way cleared by a lady deeply interested in the matter, Mrs. E. L. Withington, who, by personal appeals and letters sent to various descendants of these settlers throughout the country, has been successful in raising the substantial nucleus of a fund.

The undertaking has so far progressed that the design for the monument has been suggested and submitted by George P. Tilton of this city, a gentleman of marked artistic tastes and experience, whose designs and castings in bronze, which he has recently undertaken as an avocation, are beginning to command attention and favorable criticism.

It was largely under his direction that a monument was set up a few years ago in the same vicinity marking the camp from which Arnold and his army passed to the vessels in Newburyport harbor, on their famous expedition to Quebec.

This monument consists of a large boulder, to which is attached a bronze tablet with inscription. The design under consideration for the proposed monument also calls for a monolith some six feet high, but fashioned and finished, to bear on its sides tablets on which the names of the first settlers are to be inscribed.

This simply was the original conceit, but as it became apparent that a larger sum of money than was at first looked for will be available, it is hoped to make the memorial more attractive and striking by surmounting it with a design of a ship of the Mayflower or 17th century pattern, done in bronze,

The monument as thus sketched will be a noteworthy addition to the many which have been set up in the territory of the old town within the past twenty years, the first of which was Ward's famed bronze of Washington, the last, Mrs. Kitson's beautiful design of "The Volunteers" for a memorial of the soldiers and sailors.

COATS OF ARMS USED BY UNTITLED AMERICANS.

HERALDRY IS NOW A STUDY.—SOME OF THE CRESTS USED BY MEMBERS OF THE NEW YORK SOCIETY, WITH THEIR MOTTOES.—ORIGIN OF THE MEDIAEVAL CUSTOM.

Americans now use coats of arms more generally than ever before.

Members of old families, wishing to join the colonial societies, have revived the arms that were used by their ancestors. But there is no law against any one adopting any crest and motto that suits the fancy, and your stationer will find you a king at arms whenever you need his services.

BY JOHN GILMER SPEED.

Coats of arms and kindred heraldic symbols are used in the United States now to a greater extent than ever before. The stationers and engravers of New York bear testimony to the fact that nowadays they are asked much more frequently than ten years ago to make designs for crests for note paper and to manufacture book plates with arms indicating noble lineage emblazoned in gay colors for the simple democrats who people this land and proudly boast that liberty and equality are the best heritage of a free people.

This boom in crests and coats of arms, singularly enough, has arisen through what was meant to be patriotism. A few years ago half a dozen societies—colonial, Revolutionary, and military—were started in this country. They were called "Sons of the Revolution," "Daughters of the Revolution," "Colonial Dames," and so on. Membership was limited to those who could trace their ancestry to fathers or mothers who had something to do with our war for liberty, or who lived in the country previous to the Revolution.

An applicant for membership in any of these so-called patriotic societies is required to file with his or her application a true genealogical record reaching back at least to the time when one ancestor or another was a soldier in the Continental army.

GENEALOGICAL RESEARCHES.

Naturally enough, such a requirement has greatly stimulated the study of family records, and such studies have brought to light the coats of arms, the high sounding mottoes, and the aristocratic crests now so generally used on the note paper of the gentle dames who control and make delightful the best society of the country. To be sure, the use of crests in America is not new; the notable fact just now is that they should be so generally used.

In the earlier days of the colonies there were a good many persons of gentle birth who came to the New World in search of freedom and in the hope of fortune. Among the Puritans who fled from the persecutions in England and the Huguenots who left France in dread of Roman Catholic intolerance, there were many families of gentle birth, if not of high nobility. And the large land-owners who settled in Maryland and Virginia were as a rule gentlefolk.

All of these, or nearly all of them, after the mediaeval custom then almost in as full force as at any time in the two preceding centuries, bore arms and used heraldic devices of various sorts. These are the coats of arms that are now being revived by their descendants, of the various societies of which mention has been made.

Later in the history of the United States the persons who came here to settle were of different quality, ranging from middle-class English, Irish and Scotch, to the peasants of Germany. From such as these the great mass of Americans are descended. If any of them were entitled in the days of chivalry to use arms it is most likely that they did not know it. Indeed, the great mass of Americans cannot trace their lineage beyond the arrival in this country of the ancestors who begat them.

This fact, however, does not prevent them, when they have become wealthy and proud of their wealth, from securing, through one agency or another, coats of arms with royal or ducal quarterings, according to their fancy.

Cussan, in his "Handbook of Heraldry," in speaking of the fondness for coats of arms in America, says:

"There are probably more assumptive arms borne in America than anywhere else. Nor are the bearers of such arms to be so much blamed as the unscrupulous self-styled heralds who supply them. The advertising London tradesmen who profess to find arms are, for the most part, less anxious to give themselves the trouble of examining the requisite documents—even if they possess the necessary ability to do so, which many certainly do not—than they are of securing the fee. If, therefore, they cannot readily find in the printed pages of Burke, they do not hesitate to draw from the depth of their inner consciousness, as Carlyle expresses it.

Many American gentlemen, consequently, engrave their plates and adorn the panels of their carriages with heraldic insignia to which they have no right whatever; and this, too, though they may have an honorary claim to arms as ancient and honorable as those of a Talbot or a Hastings. Nor have native professors of the science been behindhand in distributing their worthless favors. The names of Thomas Johnson, John Coles, and Nathaniel Hurd (Boston heraldic painters of the eighteenth century), are notorious in New England as those of manufacturers of fictitious arms and pedigrees."

AMERICAN COLLEGE OF HERALDRY.

These worthies, of whom Cussans speaks with such contempt, have their successors, and they not only thrive in Boston, but in Philadelphia, Washington, and in New York. The most notable of these heraldic inventors was the late Albert Welles, who for many years, and until his death in 1881, maintained in the Society Library Building in University place what he called the American College of Heraldry. Mr. Welles, for a modest consideration, would construct a genealogy which ran back into the remotest antiquity.

It made no difference in the price, and was merely a matter of taste on the part of the purchaser, whether he should trace the lineage to the beautiful and frail Helen of Troy or to the bold Achilles, for Mr. Welles could do either trick with equal ease. If the proud founder of a new-old family was not classic in his taste, Mr. Welles could just as easily find a more modern forbear, and William the Conqueror, Gustavus Adolphus, Harry Hotspur or Owen Glendower were often called into requisition. For pious folk he could do even more wonderful things and find a paternal starting place in the cardinal's palace and the maternal beginning in a nunnery. He was an ingenious man, this Mr. Welles, as the handsome books he left amply attest.

But in 1881 he died, and as he was the faculty of the college, king of arms and, indeed, the college itself, this great institution with his decease went out of existence. This was a great pity, for never before or since had we in this country an antiquarian with so industrious an imagination. There are others, however, still in the business, and any man or woman who desires to display this convincing evidence of noble descent and who at the same time has the modest price can find exactly the right person to do what is needed.

NOBLE ENGLISH NAMES.

There are many noble English names that are quite common in this country, and many of the bearers of them do not scruple to use the arms of those English families, though it is as a rule certain that none of them have any evidence that entitles them to such usage. In any directory, whether of New York or another American city, we find Derbys, Buckinghams, Spencers, Talbots, Hastingses, Hamiltons and Greys, but few if any of these people seriously believe that they come from the same stock as those who now bear the titles belonging to those names in England.

Many of them, however, use the coats of arms on their carriages and the crests and mottoes on their note paper. One thing can be said, however, to the credit of Americans—they never use crests on their visiting cards. Spaniards and some other Latins do this, but no Americans on the hither side of the equator was ever known to do it.

HERALDIC QUARTERINGS.

So that all our readers may fully understand the technical terms used in describing crests, it is well for them to know that "gules" means red, "azure" means blue, "vert" means green, "purpure" means purple, "or" means gold and so on. A coat of arms is in the form of a shield and this shield is divided into nine squares, as follows:—

D	B	E
F	A	G
H	C	I

- A, the centre.
 B, the point of the chief.
 D, the dexter canton of the chief.
 E, the sinister canton of the chief.
 F, the dexter flank.
 G, the sinister flank.
 C, the point of the base.
 H, the dexter canton of the point.
 I, the sinister canton of the point.

Mr. De Vermont, who published a book some ten years ago called "Heraldica Americana," gathered all the American coats of arms of families established in the country previous to 1800. He seemed to think that no persons of authentic nobility came to the United States after that. Indeed, his genealogical studies appear to have made him at times cynical, and he scoffs at some of our most cherished traditions with what might be called rude recklessness. For instance, he almost says outrightly that the Rev. Samuel Peters, in his life of Hugh Peters, says things unworthy of a historian, and most of all is Mr. De Vermont offended that the Rev. Peters should affirm without convincing proof that during the iron rule of Cromwell many scions of noble families settled in America and established families.

SCIONS OF NOBLE LINE.

Mr. Peters says among such were:—

Thomas Seymour, of the ducal house of Somerset.

Three brothers of Lord Hanley, Earl of Derby.

William Russell, of the ducal house of Bedford.

A Pierrepont, legal heir to the now extinct duchy of Kingston.

A Montague, a younger scion of the Earl of Sandwich.

A Graham, of the ducal house of Montrose.

A Clinton, a scion of the Earls of Lincoln.

Whatever Mr. Peters' authority may have been, it is quite certain that the American Pierreponts have always used the Kingston arms, and the American Clintons those of the Earls of Lincoln.

The various States have coats of arms and many of them are fearful to behold. Examined from an heraldic standpoint, they are most wonderfully constructed and indicate that they are of home and homely manufacture. My own gallant State has a coat of arms more appropriate for the sign of a country tailor than for the seal of a commonwealth which was known in frontier days as the "dark and bloody ground," and which still is—but I had better not say anything about that.

ORIGIN OF HERALDRY.

Heraldry, as such, is of mediæval origin and was introduced into England from Germany through France. It was necessary in the days when all men were soldiers and all the world at war for men to know one another at sight. As mail was used and the faces of men concealed, it was well to have on the shield some device which indicated the individuality of the warrior. Otherwise men could not know friends from foes.

It was in this way that coats of arms became in general use in the eleventh century. Noblemen invented their coats of arms, and their descendants changed them with much freedom, placing on their shields symbols indicating marriage into another family or celebrating some achievement in statecraft or in war. In time this matter of arms became so serious that in England a college of heraldry was established, and it was a serious matter for any one to use arms to which he was not entitled. In the fourteenth century this matter was considered of the greatest importance, and one of the notable English law cases relates to the dispute in 1384 between Sir Richard Scrope of Bolton, and Sir Robert Grosvenor, for the right to bear the arms "azure, a bend or."

The greatest men in England, including John of Gaunt, gave testimony that one or another had used the coat of arms beyond the memory of man. Scrope won and Grosvenor was directed to use other arms. It is interesting to note that according to Burke, both of these families have continued in the male line till now, and the arms then decided upon are still used.

A NOTABLE USE.

A little later than this, when John de Hastings, Earle of Pembroke, died childless, there arose a dispute for his heirship between Reginald Grey, his heir general, and Edward Hastings, the heir male and of the name, but of the half blood. A military court tried the case, and Grey won. Meantime Hastings had assumed the arms unbroken. He was directed to label them, and declining, he was put in prison for contumacy, and stayed there for sixteen years.

The last trial in the Earl Marshal's Court, as to the right to use arms, was heard in 1720, in the case of Blount vs. Blount. Since then people have been content to settle such matters in the court of public opinion. In England the critical journals, notably the Saturday Review, are very apt to question the use of any coat of arms used by a conspicuous person without the clearest authority. When such a person is detected he is held up to a very painful ridicule.

In Notes and Queries, also, there are frequent discussions as to the validity of coats of arms of suspicious origin. When the antiquarians who contribute to that entertaining periodical tackle the history of a family all the details, even beyond the memory of man, are likely to be disclosed. As a general thing it may be said that in England the higher the rank of a family the less is the pretence of its members. I have met a royal prince who was a cad, but never an English Duke.

VARIATIONS IN ARMS.

In this country many of the family coats of arms are perverted and quite different from those it was intended that they should represent. For instance, I recently had to examine a family record, and I found that in a hundred and fifty years some six variants of a Scotch coat of arms had been used, these variants being based on a coat of arms, brought here in 1720, and itself a variant of the genuine coat on record in Scotland.

Because our great-grandfathers used coats of arms there is no surety that those particular devices were accurate. There is a presumption, however, that they were meant to be accurate; indeed, in heraldry there is not even at its best much more than presumption. Certainly there is no certainty.

There can surely be no more harm in the use of coats of arms than in family pride. When the impulse is born of pure snobbishness it is vulgar and ridiculous, and deserves to be treated as Saxe treated it in his poem, "The Proud Miss MacBride":—

Depend upon it, my snobbish friend,
Your family tread you can't ascend
Without good reason to apprehend
You may find it waxed at the farther end
By some plebeian vocation;
Or worse than that, your boasted Line
May end in a loop of stronger twine
That plagued some worthy relation!

TO PROVE A PEDIGREE THE FAD OF THE HOUR.

Pedigree hunting is the fad of the hour. The great question seems to be, "Who were my ancestors?" I have it from the very highest authority—from a man who knows more about the lines of descent of prominent American families than probably any other person in the United States. I refer to Mr. Charles H. Browning, who has devoted his entire life to the study of genealogy and heraldry, and whose most recent achievements are embodied in the Order of Runnemedede and the Order of the Crown. He is the organizer of the first and the only male member of the second.

Mr. Browning occupies a sphere which is unique. He is not a professional "pedigree hunter" in the sense that hundreds of men and women are who make a very comfortable living by catering to the vanities of those Americans who imagine themselves better than their neighbors and want to prove it. That is a profession in itself. Mr. Browning does not have to hunt for pedigrees. He is a walking encyclopaedia of genealogy. He is an expert. His services are called upon in organizing various genealogical societies. His advice is courted in matters pertaining to such things. He knows all about everybody and everybody's family away back as far as they can be traced. That's why the ladies who organized the Order of the Crown honored him with a membership in their society. He is the only man ever elected to membership in that exclusive body or who ever will be. He is sui generis.

AN AUTHORITY ON PEDIGREES.

Mr. Browning is a native of Cincinnati, Ohio, and is the son of a deceased United States navy officer. He was educated at Kenyon College, and entered upon newspaper and literary work. Long before the prevalent fad for pedigrees and pedigree orders appeared, Mr. Browning developed a taste for genealogical work by investigations into his own lineage. From experience thus derived he saw the necessity for and evolved a perfect system for the verification of pedigrees already compiled and for the growth of the family tree.

Although the Order of the Crown has not yet been fully organized, at least fifty designs have been submitted for insignia, which shows, in a measure, to what extent the fad has grown. The idea originated with Miss Farnsworth, of Detroit, who immediately communicated with Mr. Browning for advice. That gentleman naturally advocated the movement. As a result, the order is on the high road to success, is as yet without a rival, and Mr. Browning has been commissioned to compile the Year Book. That means—well, it means a nice little lump sum, anyhow.

Mr. Browning lives at Ardmore, Pa., just a short ride from that hot-bed of pedigrees, Philadelphia. For several years he edited the "American Historical Register," which was the organ of the American Heredity Society, and he is also the author of that thrilling work, "Americans of Royal Descent."

I found Mr. Browning, when I called on him one day last week, to be a most affable gentleman, who seemed to regard his work with strangely mingled enthusiasm and irony. He impressed upon me the fact that while the impression might prevail that these societies were all froth, they could not be regarded as such purely from the standpoint of establishing authentic degrees.

DR. DEPEW A "COLLATERAL."

"In some," he said, "they accept what are known as collateral members. That is to say, a member of the Sons of the American Revolution may not necessarily be descended directly from a Revolutionary soldier. His great-grandfather may not have fought in the Revolution, but if his great-grandfather's brother did he is eligible as a collateral member. That is the case with Chauncey M. Depew, who is president of the society in New York."

"What is the origin of these societies?" I asked.

"The Society of the Cincinnati was the first," replied Mr. Browning. "It was organized by Frederick William Von Steuben at the close of the Revolution, and was originally known as the Order of the Cincinnati. It died out, and when reorganized many years later it was changed from an 'order' to a 'society,' as being more typically American. Then followed the Society of 1812, the Society of the Colonial Wars, Sons of the Revolution, Daughters of the Revolution, Colonial Dames, Mayflower Society, Founders and Patriots, Daughters of Cincinnati, the Aztec Club (composed of officers who served in the Mexican war), the Society of Foreign Wars, Daughters of the Confederacy, Order of Washington, Colonial Society of Massachusetts, Descendants of the Pioneers of America, Sons of Veterans, United States Navy Veteran Association, and—that's about all I can think of at present."

A MERE INCIDENT.

"You must have many experiences in your work which are amusing," I ventured.

"Yes, indeed," replied Mr. Browning. "Take the women who claim to be lineal descendants of Benjamin Franklin. The fact that Franklin was never married doesn't seem to worry them in the least. They don't seem to mind a little thing like a marriage ceremony where their ancestors are concerned.

As a matter of fact, the sole idea of many persons seems to be to avail themselves of every opportunity to found a society to get a badge of some sort or other. To be alliterative, like the preacher of 'rum, Romanism and rebellion' fame, I should characterize the prevailing tendency as a case of badges, buttons and banquets. To put up a monument, to erect an historic building, to look pretty on parade, to get one's name in the paper, those are the things to strive for, and then comes happiness. One chap thinks he's a huckleberry better than another chap, and there is also great happiness in that, you know."

I asked, in my guileless innocence, what object a person could have in joining these societies.

"The object seems to be," explained the cynical Mr. Browning, "to get in yourself, and then keep the other fellows out."

And he spoke with an air of authority. He is a member of only one society, with the exception of the Order of the Crown, that one being the Order of Runnymede, the members of which must trace their ancestry back to some of the Barons who wrested Magna Charta from King John. For applicants to the other societies he acts as preceptor.

In discussing the Order of the Crown, Mr. Browning informed me that the society was started by members of the Colonial Dames, and one had to first be a Colonial Dame to gain admission.

MISS FARNSWORTH'S DESCENT.

Naturally there is considerable curiosity as to just who was the originator of so unique a society as the Order of the Crown. I learned from Mr. Browning that Miss Henrietta Lynde Farnsworth derives her blood royal through her mother, who was a daughter of Samuel Valentine, of Hopkinton, Mass., whose paternal grandparents were John Valentine, of Boston, "Notary and Tabellion Publick for Mass. Bay," or His Majesty's Advocate General for the province of Massachusetts, New Hampshire, and the colony of Rhode Island, who died in 1724, and Mary, sister of Benjamin Lynde, Chief Justice of Massachusetts, and daughter of Judge Simon Lynde, of Boston.

Miss Farnsworth's line to royalty is from this point run through Judge Lynde's mother, Elizabeth Digby, a granddaughter of Simon Digby, of Bedale, in Rutlandshire, whose grandfather, Sir John Digby, Knight, was seated at Eye, Kettelsby, in Leicestershire. His only wife was a daughter of Sir Nicholas Griffin, Knight, of Braybroke, Sheriff of Nottinghamshire, in 1457, a grandson of Sir Thomas Griffin, Knight, of Werton-Favel, in Northamptonshire, and his wife, Elizabeth, a daughter of Sir Warine le Latimer, second Baron Latimer, of Braybroke, who died in 1350, and a sister of Sir Thomas le Latimer, who was the leader of the religious sect called Lollards, in the time of King Richard II.

 ODD MARRIAGE NOTICES.

In searching the files of some old papers recently, the writer came across some very unique marriage notices which are well worth preserving, says John de Morgan in "Printers' Ink." It was customary for the editor to make some personal allusion to the wedding, not in the news columns, but immediately following the announcement. Sometimes friends would attach gags and queer doggerel, very uncomplimentary to the newly wedded pair, and some of the editorial comments were enough to place him in peril had it not been that the bridegroom rarely saw the notice until long after the honeymoon waned.

In the New York Weekly Museum for June 1, 1814, appeared the following:

"On Saturday, May 14, at Charlton, Luther Marble to Miss Sophia Stone."

To which the editor appended the words:

"A very cold, hard match."

On March 27, 1815, this notice appeared in the Museum, under the heading "Nuptial":

"In Charleston, S. C., Jan. 31, Stephen Lyon of New York to Miss Rebecca Lamb.

"The happy time at length's arrived
 In Scripture days foretold,
 Wheu Lamb and Lyon doth unite,
 Embrace, and keep one fold."

Another Museum nuptial notice read thus :

"At Blooming Grove, John Reeder of this city to Miss Elizabeth Tompkins of the former place.

'One volume of the "Rights of Man"
 From maiden errors freed her;
 She saw the title, liked the plan,
 And soon became a Reeder.' "

In the New Haven Athenaeum of August 6, 1814, there appeared a notice which naturally attracted attention because of the strange appropriateness of the names of all parties concerned. The editor, evidently a wag, appended a few words, the whole reading as follows :

"Married, at Peterville, August 1, the Rev. Dr. Cannon G. Powder to the amiable and accomplished Miss Sparks.

Ed.—We are apprehensive that Sparks among such combustibles as these will produce an explosion at Salt Peterville."

In another issue the writer found the following nuptial notice :

"On June 24th, at Hempstead, Rev. William Heart to Miss Lydia Moore of this city.

'Whoever heard the like before,
 She's got two hearts,
 And he's got Moore.' "

A witty and punning notice from over the water announced the marriage in Great Malvern of Mr. Nott, the pickle-maker, to Miss Burnett, in these words :

"Burn it," cried Nott, "it makes me smile,
 As well as feverish and hot;
 My wife she loves me all the while,
 But still declares she loveth Nott."

EDWARD NOYES WESCOTT.

The author of "David Harum" wrote : "But what is consistency? It is merely living up to others' conception of our natural course of conduct. We say of one, 'well, he is the last person I should ever have thought would do that,' whereas the mental and moral progress of retrogression of that man, going on within himself, has led most logically to the sequence so unexpected in others.

"Now what would you expect of me?" he supplemented, whimsically, "a man whose name is No-Yes," and then he laughed in the self-humoring way of one who repeats a joke oft told before. "Look at my hands, too," he added, holding them out for inspection. "One is strong, well developed, capable; the other is almost effeminate. Could anything be more inconsistent?"

The "Nonagenarian" relates the following regarding the religious disturbance in Newbury caused by the preaching of the famous Whitefield. Rev. William Johnson would not admit him into his pulpit, and the great revivalist was obliged to preach in a private house. "I have often heard my great aunt Sara Noyes describe the sensation produced by the eloquent divine. My great-grandfather, Dea. John Noyes, fully sympathized in the disapproval evinced by his pastor, and issued a strict edict forbidding any of his family attending what he termed "those disorderly assemblies." Aunt Sara, then a girl in her teens, entertained, as was natural, a strong desire to see and hear one whose name was on every tongue, and whose words and their effects were the chief topic of conversation on every side. At last, after much fear and trembling, she mustered courage to make a clandestine attempt to satisfy her curiosity. An evening meeting was to be held at a house in the vicinity, and she determined to brave her father's displeasure, if her absence was discovered, and go. It was a dark, cheerless night, when, with a throbbing heart, stealing down the stairs and noiselessly opening the door, she ran lightly down the gravel walk. Her hand was on the latch of the front gate, when a voice, in an authoritative tone, exclaimed, "Go back!" Startled, affrighted, she stopped, turned, and peered into the darkness. No one was in sight. Through the uncurtained window she could see her father and the other members of her family seated around the bright wood fire. Concluding that, owing to the nervous timidity which this disobedience to paternal mandates had caused, imagination had conjured up this voice, with another long and searching look around, she opened the gates. "Go back!" reiterated the voice, even more decidedly than at first, just in her ear. What could it mean? Again she stopped, waited, looked, and listened. Nothing unusual could be seen, and not a sound could be heard save the wind sighing through the trees. Sarah Noyes was a resolute girl, not easily turned from any purpose she had deliberately formed, neither had she much belief in the supernatural. Thrusting back her fears, with a strong will she stilled her throbbing heart, and with a firm step she again started forward. "Go back, go back," thundered the voice, in such a powerful and authoritative tone that, thrilling in every nerve, the astonished girl, completely subdued, hastily turned, and fled into the house. Though she lived to a great age, and could never be reckoned a credulous person, to the last hour of her life she firmly believed that this was a divine interposition to keep her from evil."

It is further related by the venerable Nonagenarian that it had been the rule of the Church that every child presented for the rite should be admitted to baptism. It was whispered among the people that Parson Woods intended to set aside the "half-way covenant," and baptize only the offspring of church members. A niece of Aunt Sara Noyes (recently married) and her husband had come to reside with and take care of the old lady and her farm. A son was born to this couple, which Aunt Sara desired christened. As neither of the parents were communicants, she thought it proper to ascertain the clergyman's sentiments. Without hesitation, he promised to baptize the infant: "It was too cold (March) to take out such a young babe; when the weather grew milder he would arrange for the ceremony." But Sunday after Sunday passed; the minister could never be made to appoint a day for the rite, some excuse was always ready, till at length it became understood that thenceforth only church members would be permitted to present their children at the baptismal font. Aunt Sara was excessively indignant! The great granddaughter of the Rev. James Noyes; the daughter of the former senior deacon (one next in dignity to the pastor), and herself one who at all times had been most active, not only in the families of the clergymen, but throughout the parish, whenever her services or money could promote the good of the Church, Aunt Sara had come to be regarded, and I think, also (though she would have disdained my assertion), to look upon herself somewhat in the light of a lady elect. A slight to such a person could not remain unnoticed. Many were really grieved at this change in the baptismal ordinance; others were angry at what they considered duplicity; many remarked that it was "the cunning, the manœuvring that excited ire and aversion. The pastor's manner was so arbitrary and domineering that they must regard it as positively insolent. He ought to be taught that he was not a pope to head a hierarchy, but simply a preacher chosen to minister to a Congregational society. Several refusing longer to listen to his teachings, left the society for other parishes, while Aunt Sara passed the day of private devotion at home." Reminiscences of a Nonagenarian.

A Nottingham clergyman, in baptizing a baby, paused in the midst of the service to inquire the name of the infant, to which the mother, with a profound courtesy, replied, "Shady, sir, if you please."

"Shady," replied the minister, "Then it is a boy and you mean Shadrach."

"No, please your reverence, it is a girl."

"And pray," asked the inquisitive pastor, "how happened you to call the child by such a strange name?"

"Why sir," responded the woman, "if you must know, our name is Bower, and my husband said as he should like her to be called Shady, because Shady Bower sounds so pretty."

"THERE—my blessing with thee!
And these few precepts in thy memory
See thou character: Give thoughts no tongue,
Nor any unproportioned thought his act.
Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar.
Those friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
Grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel;
But do not dull thy palm with entertainment.
Of each new-hatch'd, unfledged comrade. Beware
Of entrance to a quarrel, but, being in,
Bear't that th' opposed may beware of thee.
Give every man thy ear, but few thy voice,
Take each man's censure, but reserve thy judgment.
Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy,
But not express'd in fancy; rich, not gaudy;
For the apparel oft proclaims the man. . . .
Neither a borrower nor a lender be;
For loan oft loses both itself and friend,
And borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry.
This above all: To thy own self be true,
And it must follow, as the night the day,
Thou can'st not then be false to any man."

The following memorial was prepared at a Session of the 5th Avenue and 37th St. Presbyterian Church, Dec. 2, 1900, by Elder Theron C. Strong:

"The great bereavement which we have sustained, both personally and as a Session, by the death of our beloved associate, Henry D. Noyes, impels us to place on the records of our church this tribute to his memory.

Some of us have been associated with Dr. Noyes as members and elders of the Church of the Covenant and of this church for about 30 years.

His manly, Christian character, and his personal traits, as revealed in his professional, social, domestic and religious life, won for him always our admiration and love.

His earlier associates can never forget him as they knew him during the period of his increasing success and fame, before the infirmities of age laid hold of him. His singularly graceful and dignified presence, his refined and intelligent countenance, his clear and penetrating eye, his polished and courteous manner, his genial and cordial bearing, presented outward features of remarkable attraction and power.

Nor can we forget the part he took in the religious life of the church, especially in the weekly meetings, when, with the keenest insight into spiritual things, with remarkable precision and beauty of diction and with genuine spiritual power, he commented on the eternal verities, or led in uplifting and inspiring prayer.

In recalling his professional career, we realize that Dr. Noyes was in truth a genuine exemplification of the Christian physician. Of liberal culture and wide reading; of the highest scientific attainments, and in all respects abreast of the times; with a reputation which placed him in the very front rank in his profession, he yet possessed a child-like faith in Christ and consistently followed in His steps.

It was a beautiful feature of his medical career that his brilliant and commanding abilities were freely expended in the relief of suffering and distress among the poor, by following the Divine mission to "open the eyes of the blind," and to "bring light to them that sit in darkness."

And now that there only remains to us the memory of what he was, as our colleague and friend, as well as in the assemblies of the great congregation, we rest assured of a joyful meeting with him again in the great Reunion.

We offer our sincere sympathy to his bereaved family, but rejoice with them in their possession of the many and blessed associations connected with his character and career, and the contemplation of a life work Christ-like and complete."

INDEX OF MARRIAGES ARRANGED ALPHABETI- CALLY BY THE SURNAMES.

The numbers before the names are the serial numbers of the Noyeses whom they married. The number after the name denotes the page where the marriage is found. Where no number is given, the Noyes ancestry is not known, and the name of the Noyes is given. A dash — indicate that the given name is not known.
